REPORT OF THE DEPUTY MINISTER

To: The Honourable Louis P. Cecile, Q.C.,
Minister of Public Welfare.

The increase in population within Ontario, together with the decline in employment opportunities, will likely cause expenditures from public sources for welfare purposes to reach approximately $100 million in 1961. These expenditures are granted under provincial legislation and it is anticipated that the provincial share will be in excess of 50% of the total amount expended.

Welfare services within the last decade have been concerned primarily with the handicapped, the aged and children. The broad purpose of all welfare legislation is, of course, to lessen distress and to provide a source of income for those who have insufficient resources or who do not have the opportunity to earn their own livelihood. Provincial legislation and funds are bolstered, to a degree, by federal Acts which recognize certain groups of persons on a sharable basis with the Province and also through flat-rate universal pensions or allowances. Family Allowances and universal Old Age Security pensions account for the largest federal expenditures.

There are several major factors which make it necessary for public assistance to be granted. Among the more prominent causes are disability or illness (both physical and mental); age and subsequent retirement; loss of the breadwinner; neglect of children; and unemployment. The three most notable types of cases, which must be recognized continuously, whatever the level of economic conditions, are those which are concerned with retirement, disability and survivors.

In almost every country a contributory insurance-maintenance plan anticipates the future needs of these persons. We could view this as a responsibility which should be treated by the individual, himself. We might consider that he should prepare, well in advance, for his own future needs and the needs of his family—for the eventualities which will probably arise. Experience has shown, however, that such individual preparation does not take place.

Total expenditures recorded by the Department of Public Welfare amounted to $82,648,962 for the fiscal year ending March 31st, 1960. The provincial share of these expenditures was 51%; the federal government contributed 28%; the municipalities, 17%; and 4% came from other sources. The total represents a per capita of population cost amounting to $14.29 for every person in the Province.

Beyond these amounts, it should be recognized that Unconditional Grants are provided by the Province to each municipality, to "assist . . . in the provision of welfare and social services", at the local level. A basic amount of $2 per capita is paid to all municipalities, plus a variable additional per capita sum granted in accordance with the population of the municipality. For example, a township with a population of 36,376 persons received a per capita grant of $2.75 for "the provision of welfare and social services"—or a total amount of $100,034. The sharable expenditures with the Province which this municipality was required to meet, from its own taxing sources, amounted to $20,006—or about one-fifth of the amount it received by way of the Unconditional Grant. In the case of a City with a population of 52,668 persons, the Unconditional Grant at a per capita rate of $3.00 amounted to $158,004; while the actual local share of the expenditures with the Province for welfare and social services amounted to $79,330—or about one-half of the amount of the Unconditional Grant.

In passing, we may note that the municipal per capita cost for these services amounted to an average of $2.41 for the year. In themselves, the Unconditional Grants exceed, in almost every instance, the total cost of the welfare services charged to municipal taxation.

UNEMPLOYMENT

The major stop-gap for those who are unemployed is Unemployment Insurance; secondly, public works measures are frequently used; and finally, general welfare assistance (commonly known as direct relief) is granted to relieve distress caused by unemployment. Many persons who have exhausted their unemployment insurance benefits rely upon their own savings "to tide them over". It is anticipated that the worst of the slump has passed and that, with improved weather conditions and increased activities in construction and manufacturing, employment will become more buoyant.

It is more apparent that automation is largely responsible for the displacement of many persons in the working force—particularly unskilled workers. While services and certain types of manufacturing are absorbing greater numbers of employees, it is evident that technological changes have brought about much higher production in the majority of the plants engaged in fabricating steel and electrical products.

PUBLIC WORKS: Jobs are obviously the best alternatives to unemployment. Public works programs contribute not only to the good of the community as a whole; but they are also of great benefit to workers from the ranks of the unemployed, in providing useful, constructive work.

At the present time, the three levels of government, under a plan sponsored by the federal authorities, have in operation a public works program which, although restricted to the winter months, has served to lessen unemployment to some extent. This plan is financed jointly by the federal and provincial governments in the amount of 75% of the wages of the persons employed. The municipalities are responsible for the balance of 25%, plus the costs of materials, equipment and transportation. Throughout the Province, a number of useful public works projects are now under way.

Capital improvement measures in the form of municipal sewage treatment projects are being introduced by some municipalities in co-operation with the federal government over a three-year-period. These projects will provide direct employment for a large number of persons as well as additional jobs in services and supporting industries.

In contrast to short-term public works projects, the objective of a more extensive and well-planned program makes possible the construction of needed improvements in public utilities and facilities. The normal, short-term, winter works projects are generally established for the purpose of engaging needy unemployed persons—that is, those who require jobs to provide a source of income. On the other hand, employees in long range public works projects are selected because of their suitability and availability for the work.

In the construction of public housing there are outstanding examples of effective planning resulting in projects designed to meet the housing needs of low-income families. The Regent Park Housing Project in the City of Toronto is one of these. Of special interest, too, are the Elderly Persons' Housing Aid projects established in many municipalities to provide low-rental, self-contained apartment units for elderly persons who are able to live normal lives in the community.

This type of construction contributes to the employment of a wide variety of persons engaged in the building trades. Housing projects of all types are to be encouraged to the fullest extent.

GENERAL WELFARE ASSISTANCE: When jobs are scarce unemployed persons generally find it necessary to make adjustments in their standards of living. The degree varies depending upon the financial resources readily available. Economic and social needs also differ, in degree, when a constant source of income is not being received. Higher personal and family standards of living prevail for a greater proportion of the population than existed during the depression of the thirties.

Many of the cases applying for public assistance, today, are complicated as a result of debts contracted for household goods (furnishings and appliances), cars, and with finance companies, etc.—acquired, of course, prior to application for public assistance. They point to a common problem in respect to the management of relief funds when such persons qualify for aid.

The difficulty in adjusting to a lower standard of living is illustrated in a recent report which concerns a young man, 29 years of age who, together with his wife, is in receipt of $30 weekly by way of Unemployment Insurance, plus some income derived through occasional employment by the wife. They are renting a four-room flat for $50 monthly. This couple are not eligible for relief at the present time, and the representative who reported on the case had noted these comments:

“This is an unfortunate case of a man let out of (name of company) after twelve years—unable to find other employment—finding it difficult to acclimatize himself to a lower standard of living.”

Direct relief—particularly in the case of employable persons—is generally recognized as a short-term or emergency program, although the majority of cases have exhausted their unemployment insurance benefits. It is true that, while many persons are burdened with debts or have no other income or resources, there is a large number of employable persons who do obtain some casual employment, or can manage reasonably well because another member of the household is employed gainfully, either partially or full time. Frequently there are helpful resources within the household (roomers and boarders) and sometimes other income of a continuing nature.

The sharable allowances to individuals and families under The General Welfare Assistance Act have recently been increased. Municipalities may supplement their normal 20% share, where additional need is apparent. As noted previously, such additional assistance is made possible through the Unconditional Grants which are provided to each municipality for welfare and social services on behalf of their residents.

It should be emphasized that The General Welfare Assistance Act requires municipalities to grant aid to eligible cases. In the light of the funds made available by the Province in support of this municipal program, the legislation states:

“A municipality shall provide assistance to the persons who reside in the municipality and who are eligible for such assistance.”

The Act and Regulations outline the terms and conditions under which the Province will reimburse the municipalities for the major portion of the expenditures they incur in meeting their legislative obligations.

MUNICIPAL ADMINISTRATION

There is increasing evidence that consolidation of welfare services at the local level is needed. At this time, each municipality is required to deal with a variety of local welfare problems as well as individual cases not treated under the special programs administered directly by the Department. There are 976 separate municipalities in Ontario — 55% of them have populations of less than 2,000 persons. With such a small population base, many municipalities find it quite impossible to serve needy cases in the same manner as the majority of the cities and other larger municipal units. There is not a sufficient volume of cases in small municipalities to require the services of a qualified person to deal with the problems that beset some of their citizens.

Existing legislation — particularly The General Welfare Assistance Act and The Homemakers and Nurses Services Act — makes possible the consolidation of local welfare services at the county level. At the present time, several of Ontario's counties have plans under way to establish a unified administration of the services that are designated as the responsibility of local municipalities. Under such an administration, many local municipal clerks would be relieved of welfare work. These tasks, in many instances, have just been “tacked on” to their normal duties; and, as might be expected, there is sometimes a failure to pursue the proper course in providing adequate standards of aid, or in taking necessary steps towards assisting individuals and families to become self-supporting again.

All municipalities have some cases which present out-of-ordinary problems involving some of the more prominent social ills — marital discord, family breakdowns, desertions and dissolute behaviour. Ill-health lies at the base of many of the problems presented; and, of course, increased unemployment has brought added concern. Municipal welfare administrators, today, are responsible for a wide variety of chores which are not only related to the granting of aid to needy persons, but include the more specialized services such as hospitalization, nursing home and other institutional types of care; cases of child neglect; housing needs; and rehabilitation.

There can be no question that constructive measures must be adopted to remedy regressive ills. Such measures must take the form of preventive services. This is not to say that there are no enlightened services available. On the contrary, some municipalities, children's aid societies and other organizations engaged in welfare services have adopted progressive procedures and are maintaining excellent programs. But, until such time as larger administrative units are established and adequately manned, progress will be slow in countering some of the destructive tendencies which, although involved with a relatively small proportion of the population, are nevertheless detrimental to the community as a whole. Palliative treatment of social conditions can sometimes be the most expensive in the long run. Consolidation of local welfare services within a county must be accomplished, not only to bring a greater degree of uniformity in standards of assistance, but also to achieve a unified approach towards the adoption of corrective and rehabilitative measures.

DESERTION AND MARITAL PROBLEMS

Desertion and common-law households are probably responsible for more complications in the administration of public assistance than any other type of case. It would appear that there is no marked increase in the incidence of desertion; but, nevertheless, a substantial group receives support from taxing funds, both in the form of Direct Relief and Mothers' Allowances.

I wonder in cases of abandonment — and that is what desertion is, particularly where children are involved — whether we should not consider that a criminal offence has been committed. If so, Section 185 of the Criminal Code describes the type of person with whom we are dealing. The terms "abandon" or "expose", for example, are defined as including:

- (i) a wilful omission to take charge of a child by a person who is under a legal duty to do so, and
- (ii) dealing with a child in a manner that is likely to leave that child exposed to risk without protection.

In the first instance, it is probably a proper step to have a deserting husband dealt with under The Deserted Wives' and Children's Maintenance Act of Ontario. When there is a repetition of the offence, or a failure on the part of the man to provide financially for his family as ordered by the court, then a criminal charge might be laid.

Where it is found that a couple cannot live together without exposing the children to emotional and, sometimes, physical hardships, and in certain other cases of marital discord, the Family Court judge, under The Deserted Wives' and Children's Maintenance Act, can weigh the evidence in the best interests of all concerned.

But desertion and abandonment of children are cowardly and thoughtless offences. I need not dwell on the unhappiness which is created in a household when a man fails to meet his basic legal responsibilities. The major effects of desertion and abandonment are related to the financial hardships which cause children to suffer. More than that, the deserter foists his own responsibilities on neighbours and other taxpayers of the community at large.

We are aware of the handicaps and risks for children who are deprived of one parent — in most instances, the father. Broken homes do create many difficulties in living which do not apply to the normal family setting.

There are problems in apprehending fathers who desert and leave their family responsibilities to others; but it is possible to locate a goodly proportion of these deserters and, generally, the man is found to be employed. I need not comment on the decisions of the courts when such men are brought before them, other than to say that the order of the court may now be enforced by garnishment proceedings — that is, under The Deserted Wives' and Children's Maintenance Act.

Section 16 of that Act reads as follows:

16. Any order for payment of money may also be filed with the clerk of any division court and enforced by garnishment proceedings, by execution and by judgment summons as in the case of a judgment in the division court.

The concurrent problem with desertion is that of common-law households. We are finding an increasing number of these cases, especially where the man living in a common-law union is the father of the children within the household. Many of these men have left their original families to their own devices. The common-law arrangement is an evasion of the laws of marriage and certainly not in keeping with legal responsibility.

I have dwelt at some length on this subject since it presents complications to beggar the wisdom of Solomon when we are called upon to treat such cases. We are directing specialized attention within the Department towards locating deserting husbands. We are strengthening this feature of our work by establishing a special unit to serve in this field. We anticipate taking all necessary steps so that proper maintenance payments will be made to the dependants who often suffer so grievously.

TRAINING PROGRAMS

A determined drive is under way from several sources to increase and develop educational and training measures to cope with changing social conditions. Schools of Social Work are giving every encouragement in adding to the available number of professionally trained graduates. The shortages in this profession are probably more notable than in any other.

The Department of Public Welfare has recently established an Advisory Council for Public Welfare Training under the chairmanship of Prof. Charles E. Hendry, Director of the School of Social Work of the University of Toronto. This Council will serve to assist in recruiting persons for professional training as well as other suitable individuals to fulfill the needs of the public welfare services.

Intensive training courses now function in relation to the work of most of the Branches of the Department. One course is designed particularly to provide training for personnel engaged by municipalities.

CHILD WELFARE

The fifty-five Children's Aid Societies in Ontario are autonomous organizations established under The Corporations Act. Not so many years ago, the entire cost of children's aid operations was met in part by the local municipalities, and the balance was financed by the Societies, themselves, from private community resources.

During the past number of years, the Province has participated directly in financing the cost of the work of Children's Aid Societies, and the increase in this financial participation has been spectacular. In 1949, the provincial share amounted to $282,933; in 1959 the Province paid out a total of $4,957,160 — more than seventeen times the cost in 1949.

At present, the Societies collectively raise 10% of the overall total of almost $15,000,000 that is being spent yearly, at this time, on services to children. This 10% comes from local fund raising campaigns, in some of the jurisdictions, stimulated by the local Boards of Directors because of the private structure of the Societies. Steps are now under way to review the administrative and financial structure of children's aid operations throughout Ontario, together with the present child-care practices.

It should be said that there are many Societies carrying out excellent programs through their organizational structure. This is true of their administrative practices as developed for the care of children, while retaining some semblance of their private nature through local community efforts. Most Societies offer a program of protective services on behalf of children within their own homes, and these preventive measures are producing favourable results.

The majority of the Societies have collaborated fully in the stepped-up adoption drive. Most of the children adopted were first placed in the care of foster parents; they are now permanent members of families. Originally, adoption procedures were begun in July, 1921. In that year, 66 adoptions were completed. The following statistical summary shows a most gratifying increase in adoptions over the years:

Year	Adoptions Completed
1929	643
1939	1,110
1959	5,278

The all-time high in 1959 will likely be equalled when the figures are tabulated for 1960. The concentration, in recent years, in providing a permanent future for children who are available for adoption has largely been stimulated through the use of "want-ads" in the major daily newspapers of the Province. These have appeared regularly giving descriptions of individual children needing permanent homes. The response has exceeded all expectations.

Many Societies, themselves, have taken an enlightened approach in providing adoption services and have met with considerable success. Coupled with the "want-ad" campaign, an adoption clearance centre has been maintained by the Child Welfare Branch of the Department and is being utilized by almost all of the Societies.

One of the most dramatic adoption placements involved five children from one family — ages 9, 8, 6, 5 and 4 years, respectively. Over 150 persons expressed interest in adopting the five children as a group, and, at this time, they are happily and permanently placed with a family where they will have security and every opportunity to develop normally. We have been most impressed with the warm response on the part of Ontario's citizens towards accepting children on a permanent adoption basis within their family circles.

Thousands of children are now supported within their own homes by means of Mothers' Allowances — a program financed entirely through Provincial taxing sources. These allowances permit families to remain together and to continue normal family life. The majority of the mothers who receive the allowances on behalf of their children are widows; but a good proportion of the cases consists of mothers whose husbands have been declared permanently unemployable or who have deserted their families.

HOMEMAKERS AND NURSES SERVICES

A new program of particular interest is that which provides for the special needs of persons who require homemaking and nurses services within their own homes. This legislation became effective on August 1st, 1958. During the year 1960, expenditures expanded to $342,930. The Province shared 50% of this expenditure with the municipalities — 93,509 visits by nurses were made, and 16,333 days services were provided by homemakers.

This is a unique and rewarding program which not only helps to preserve families as units when they are faced with emergent problems, but has also added greatly to the care and comfort of many individuals who require help to carry on at home.

It has been estimated that the services of a housewife would cost more than $3,000 a year if it became necessary to employ hired help, on an hourly basis, within the home. It is true that housewives, who normally make a home for their families, do not consider their services on a monetary basis, but accept their tasks as "a labour of love". In most cases, homemaking involves meal-planning and preparation, child care, dishwashing, routine housecleaning, clothes washing, ironing, and other similar activities. When, because of illness or other reasons, the wife and mother is not available to take charge of the household, it will be readily seen how essential a homemaker can be in the light of such emergencies.

Most individuals and families are receiving care on a fee-for-service basis by established homemakers organizations, while nurses are generally provided through the Victorian Order or the St. Elizabeth Order of Nurses.

THE AGED

The well-known Geriatriist, Clark Tibbits has commented:

"We are, in short, only at the beginning of this development (of increasing leisure time). New varieties of energy and new kinds of machines are now coming into use. Power from atoms, energy from the sun are being harnessed. Automation or the skilful co-ordination of machines is a living actuality. Output seems bound to increase, the standard work week to continue to shorten . . . And more people will look forward to retirement as a normal phase of the cycle of life, just as they will accept prolonged educational preparation for the earlier phases of the life cycle."

It has also been said:

"Not labor but leisure will be the great problem of the decades ahead." One of the major causes of the development of pre-senility is considered to be the lack of employment. The following table shows how the proportion of men, age 65 years and over, retired from work, has increased through the years:

Year	Percentage Retired
1850	5%
1900	35%
1975	70% (estimated)

This is based on experience in the United States but would likely hold true for Ontario and Canada.

In 1958, the Department commenced a long-term study of aging — 2,000 men, at the age of 45 years having agreed to participate in the project. We have now entered into the third year and, of the original 2,000 participants, 1,950 are still co-operating in the study.

An analysis of the data acquired to date shows that most of the men have maintained their good health; 10% felt that they were in better health, while 5% reported that their health had deteriorated. During the year 1960, 1,132 men visited a doctor — with respiratory illnesses being reported in 27% of the cases (as compared to 14% in the first year of the study). There has been an increase in the number of men with coverage under Ontario's Hospital Care Insurance program — from 93% to 95.3%.

Approximately 9% moved during the first two years, mostly within the same community. Family changes were very limited — 3% reporting new additions. Employment changes were also minimal; but changes in income involved 938 men, 81% being increases. While only 3% reported changes in pension plans, three-quarters of them indicated an extension of pension coverage, a factor which they welcomed.

A most encouraging feature of the reports revealed that 93 men had furthered their education in some way — by correspondence and company-sponsored courses, university extension, vocational training; and two men completed high school requirements.

During the year 12 of the men died — a factor which is in agreement with the Province's death rate of six per 1,000 of the male population in this age group. The leading causes of death were heart or circulatory diseases, and cancer.

It seems obvious, in view of the lengthening span of life, that middle age should be utilized as a period of preparation to overcome harmful influences in the later years. There is an Irish proverb which says: "The young do not know what age is, and the aged forget what youth was."

It is becoming more certain that churches and community organizations must take a more positive role in treating the problems of the aged. These organized groups lend the best hope for the development of constructive approaches in local communities towards a fuller life for aged persons.

The will to continue working remains strong with many persons who have reached the age of 65 years. The common practice on the part of employers in severing employment at this arbitrary age — frequently because of pension plan restrictions — is less noticeable in the case of “small businesses”. The small business operator is more inclined to retain older workers and to remain at work, himself, for periods beyond the so-called retirement age.

One of these — a man now 82 years of age — recently stated that he had made up his mind to retire on his 65th birthday. He said that he would have been financially able to do so. When he broached the subject to his wife, he was told that she did not mind his retiring at all — so long as he continued to leave the house before 9 o'clock in the morning and not return until after 6 o'clock in the evening. This venerable, active gentleman remarked that this was the best response to his proposed retirement that could be given; that his continuous activity for the past 17 years has served to prolong his life in a happy, constructive, useful way.

The attitudes towards retirement on the part of some men and women are favourable because they have prepared themselves for the future. Nevertheless, those who lack the opportunity of continuing with their work when they are able and wish to do so, suffer from a form of discrimination against their efforts to contribute to their own well-being. Idleness is a cross to bear at any age; but the willing, capable, older worker, who has been forced to retire, has the slimmest of opportunities to continue useful, productive activity.

The Geriatrics Research Centre is continuing its activities under the direction of the Minister's Advisory Committee and is making commendable progress in assuring the best of medical care for residents in Homes for the Aged. The Province, during the year, contributed $152,000 to Toronto Western Hospital—that is, beyond the normal hospital grants—for the purpose of establishing a special ward for geriatric patients, mainly for residents of Homes for the Aged who periodically require specialized hospital treatment. In establishing this ward, Toronto Western Hospital has moved to the forefront in developing specialized facilities for the medical care and treatment of elderly persons. The large group of medical specialists who serve Metropolitan Toronto's Homes for the Aged will now have available the finest in hospital facilities for continuing research on the aging process, as well as for diagnosis and treatment of the diseases associated with that process.

The Homes for the Aged in Ontario are serving only older persons who are not able to live normal lives in the community. They include those who are chronically ill or disabled, or suffering from the effects of senility, or whose circumstances are such that they require a supervised form of group care.

The greatest emphasis in the construction of new homes has been placed on the provision of adequate facilities for bed-care and special-care (for residents suffering from the effects of senility). Over one-half of the new accommodation now being provided is designated for bed-ridden or semi bed-ridden cases, and for those who require specialized attention. This construction program is continuing without abatement—both on the part of municipalities (who operate the public homes) and private charitable organizations.

Provincial expenditures for capital and maintenance payments in respect of Homes for the Aged were over $7.8 million for the fiscal year ending March 31st, 1960. This amount is almost twenty times greater than the expenditures by the Province in 1950 for this program. There is conclusive evidence that Ontario's Homes for the Aged program is both necessary and acceptable in fulfilling the needs of those who do not require active hospital treatment, but who do need specialized care and attention in a group setting.

CONCLUSION

The foregoing comments deal with some of the major features which relate to the public welfare programs at this time. The views expressed are largely submitted to point out some of the complexities in the circumstances and treatment of persons who require public assistance in one form or another.

I would reiterate that much of the concern of the citizens of Ontario, in planning for future needs, could be solved through participation in a compulsory insurance maintenance plan, similar to the highly regarded American system of Social Security. The United States plan, which has universal acceptance and coverage, is superior to any flat-rate scheme. It is obvious that the subject of portable pensions has failed to attract much interest in the United States because the Social Security scheme, itself, provides a suitable pension base. In Canada, the question of the portability of pensions has developed largely because of the lack of a similar insurance plan.

I must pay tribute to the medical profession throughout Ontario who have extended excellent medical care and treatment to recipients of public welfare benefits. The Ontario Medical Association administers the Medical Welfare Plan under an Agreement with the Province. Each eligible recipient is free to use the services, when required, of the doctor of his choice, either at the doctor's office or in the recipient's home.

At the present time, the Agreement calls for a payment on the part of the Province of $1.25 monthly, for each eligible person who qualifies for or is included in the assistance granted under the various welfare programs. For the fiscal year ending March 31st, 1960, a total sum of $2,784,622 was paid to the Ontario Medical Association to provide medical services for these persons. The Province contributed $2,001,795 of this total, while the municipalities paid $782,827 as their share for recipients of General Welfare Assistance.

So far, the federal government has failed to contribute towards the cost of this Medical Welfare Plan although it is apparent that medical services are just as essential as the provisions for the other basic needs. It should be stated that a large proportion of those covered under the provincial Plan are elderly persons—including pensioners under the federal Old Age Security Act. In view of the value that must be placed on these medical services, it may be that the federal government will consider sharing in these expenditures.

It was pleasing to hear from the Honourable James Gladstone, Co-Chairman of the Joint Senate-Commons Committee on Indian Affairs, who commented on the extension of welfare services to the Indians of Ontario who live on reservations:

“ . . . two years ago there was so much resentment as to indifference of non-Indians as to the plight of our Indian people. I found that Ontario is doing something positive and the Indians are expressing their appreciation of the fact; also giving the Chiefs the money for welfare directly . . . is a tremendous value—in that the Chiefs will realize the amount of trust that this move will place them in, and I do not think that they will fail; at least the majority will do it wisely.”

I am sure that you would wish me to express appreciation to the staff of the Department who provide such devoted services in easing the problems of cases that come to our attention. The major programs are headed by capable Directors who extend themselves in the performance of their duties. Every benefit of doubt is given to the persons who qualify within the terms of the legislation.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

JAMES S. BAND,
Deputy Minister.

CHILD WELFARE BRANCH

Over the past ten years the 55 children's aid societies and the 47 institutions serving the needs of children under The Child Welfare Act and The Charitable Institutions Act have been gradually changing their programs and their emphasis as, with the help of science and experience, the needs of children more clearly emerge.

With the help of directly focussed provincial grants, the societies have placed more emphasis on the provision of services to children in their own homes forestalling thereby, in many instances, the need to remove them as neglected children. That the number served in their own homes has risen over the period by 15% from 40,000 to 46,000 children, and that the number taken into public care has fallen by 18% from 27,000 to 22,500 per year, is at least in part a reflection of the changing approach.

With the aid of socially focused publicity, the promotion of the adoption of the hard-to-place child through classified and institutional advertising and through a province-wide and to some extent inter-provincial and international adoption resource exchange, the public has become more generally conscious and accepting not only of the adoption of the "attractive" child but of the child with special needs. This program, too, has contributed to a reduction of 45% over the past ten years in the proportion of the child population who spend some time during the course of a year in the physical care of a children's aid society or welfare institution. To an increasing degree, the children who find their way into the care of these organizations are children whose difficulties do not respond rapidly to treatment. In consequence, although the proportion of the child population in the care of the societies continues to decrease, the average length of stay for those who are taken into care continues to increase—harder and harder does the core become of those children who, in order to respond to treatment, require ever lengthening terms in public care. Such children and their families, if they are to be re-united, require the best that can be provided in quality and quantity of social and other technical services. To an increasing degree, however, the demand exceeds the supply. The societies have been forced, therefore, to secure staff with demonstrated practical and intellectual capacity and help them "learn on the job". Through this approach, the time of technical staff provided in respect of the increasingly hard core load has risen over the past five years by 27% per child.

In the light of the increasing need for technical staff, the children's aid societies, their association and the Department of Public Welfare have co-operated in establishing an intensive training scheme for beginning workers who have demonstrated sufficient capacity and background to benefit from training and, in consequence, to contribute to an improvement in the services provided by the societies by whom they are employed.

The basic plan is to give in the spring and fall of each year a one-month course for from 15-20 registrants. Each such course has much improved over the preceding one. The program is gaining wider support and is, in consequence, proceeding rapidly to a point where, with some increase in the basic fees, it will be financially self-supporting, relieving the province of the basic but essential financial assistance which was, in the beginning, necessary to get the program under way.

A program in respect of the vocational improvement of the supervisory and local director levels is in the process of development on a financially self-supporting and mutual aid basis with the Department supplying, where necessary, limited instructional and administrative assistance.

Summary

The principle elements in the changing picture are these:

1. The child population continues to rise at a rate much greater than that for parents and others responsible for the care of children.
2. The proportion of the child population in the care of welfare agencies continues to decrease—45% in ten years.
3. The response to treatment, as the core of children in need of these services hardens, becomes ever less rapid and, in consequence, the average length of stay increases steadily.
4. The services demanded for this hardening core are becoming increasingly specialized, intense and expensive and tend to require more institutional settings.
5. The institutions consistent with this trend are, with a few notable exceptions, focusing their services on a reducing number of children who develop more effectively within the institution than within the private family, and upon those children who require the specialized, intense, often long-term and expensive care which is in many ways characteristic of hospital services.
6. For the following reasons:
 - (a) the increasing need for specialized services,
 - (b) the increase in the basic costs of living,

(c) the increase in the child population, and

(d) the reducing proportion of taxpayers in the total population, the weight of child welfare on the individual ratepayer is becoming increasingly intense.

DAY NURSERIES BRANCH

The fourteenth year of the program of licensing day nurseries, nursery schools and private kindergartens in Ontario showed a continuance of the slow but steady increase in the number of nurseries under supervision. The total number has doubled since 1946. There are now 326 nurseries giving care and training to ten thousand young children. During these years nearly a quarter of a million dollars has been spent to improve the standards of these nurseries and nearly five million dollars has been paid out by the province or various municipalities as grants to municipally sponsored nurseries.

Day Nurseries:

Wives and mothers have always contributed in one way or another to the economic betterment of their homes. Under modern urban conditions it is virtually impossible for women to earn money without leaving home. It is, therefore, not surprising to find that even the mothers of young children should at times be forced to go out to work. Among some 500 families using the services of the municipal-provincial day nurseries in Toronto, over 60% of the mothers are the sole support of their families. By the help given to them and their children through the kindly understanding atmosphere of the day nursery, the mother is enabled to develop a pattern of economic independence so that when her children are a little older she will be able to maintain herself and her family without recourse to public funds.

Private Kindergartens:

The unprecedented demands on our public educational system have delayed the pre-war trend toward the general inclusion of kindergartens in our school system. In many areas groups of parents have established private kindergartens so that their children may have this important experience before entering the elementary school. The licensing of these private kindergartens has assured a proper standard of premises, equipment and staffing.

Nursery Schools:

The claim has been made that the housewife of to-day in spite of labour-saving devices has actually less leisure time than her grandmother and mother enjoyed. When one considers that our young mothers seldom have other adults in the home in the daytime, neither relatives nor servants, one realizes that the nursery school is a great boon. No other group in the community has such heavy responsibility for twenty-four hours a day as mothers of children up to the age of six years. The mother who knows her children are in a safe world of their own for from 12-15 hours a week is indeed fortunate. Surely no one would begrudge her a few hours in which to attend to her housework or the care of a baby without the constant interruptions which the presence of an active child below school age occasions.

This year marks the centenary of the birth of Margaret McMillan who founded nursery schools in the slums of London to better the lot of the future generation. For thirteen years she worked unceasingly to improve the health of school children. When she had laid the foundation for our present system of school health services, she turned her attention to the children below school age. It was she who stressed that the health, education and welfare of young children were closely interwoven. Her philosophy may be summed up in her phrase "Catch them young, make them happy and healthy, and teach them through play."

Appreciation:

Ontario and British Columbia are the only two Canadian provinces having a program designed to safeguard young children in group day care. Parents, nursery staff and the public in general are becoming increasingly aware of the benefits of such a program. The staff of the Branch continues to be deeply impressed by the ready co-operation of municipal officials and staff and governing committees of the nurseries under supervision.

FIELD SERVICES BRANCH

The volume of work carried out by the Field Services Branch continued to expand during the year 1959/60. In comparison to the previous year active and pending caseloads at the beginning of the fiscal year increased in fourteen of the seventeen regions and decreased in three. The total increase in caseload for the Province was 4.5 per cent.

As stated in last year's report, the decentralized administration of Mothers' Allowances has made possible a more concerted effort to place mothers who are able to go to work in full-time employment. Occupational training has also been encouraged in many instances to enable families to become self-supporting.

Constant attention has been given to those cases involving desertion and alleged common-law relationships, particularly in the larger urban areas. In the largest regional office this has resulted in the suspension of approximately 20 cases a month. These are situations which are very difficult to detect unless special investigations are made in the evening hours. In view of the results to date it is anticipated more staff may be assigned to extend these specialized services to other areas of the Province.

In the Annual Report last year reference was made to the selection and interviewing of 2,000 men, aged 45 years, for the Long Term Study of Aging. The staff was able to complete the initial interviews with a minimum of delay and are now engaged in the completion of second interviews. The response of participants in the study to the second interview has been one of almost unanimous co-operation. It appears also that the staff on the whole found this to be a stimulating experience for themselves.

The field staff has made 230,976 calls or visits during the year to serve the general public and other Branches of the Department. Of this number 197,260 were in relation to the four major Welfare Allowances programmes and 33,716 in relation to General Welfare Assistance, rehabilitation, child and family welfare, and miscellaneous services. The total number of calls or visits increased from 211,351 last year.

The average annual cost per call or visit, exclusive of salaries, continued to decrease and was 82c compared to 85c last year. The average monthly caseload per worker increased from 387 to 396.

This was a difficult year to maintain field work on a current basis. In central and southern Ontario there was almost a record snowfall during the winter months followed by extremely bad road conditions during the spring breakup. These conditions along with unavoidable field staff shortages in three of the regions left a backlog of overdue work at the close of the fiscal year.

Staff shortages were due primarily to resignations and to several serious and lengthy illnesses among the field workers. Fortunately, with the exception of about 75 isolated cases in the North, the backlog of overdue work was confined to the last three months of the year.

The total active caseload of field workers increased from 48,825 on March 31st, 1959, to 51,014 on March 31st, 1960. The comparative figures for each of the four major Welfare Allowances programmes were as follows:

	March 31st 1960	March 31st 1959
Old Age Assistance	25,056	24,109
Blind Persons' Allowances	1,949	1,821
Disabled Persons' Allowances	13,538	12,729
Mothers' Allowances	10,471	10,166
Total	51,014	48,825

There is conclusive evidence that the quality of field work on the whole improves each year. Much of the improvement in the past five years stems from the method of selecting field staff and the six weeks of training they receive under the direction of Miss M. V. Dike before commencing to work in the field.

On Christmas Day we were advised of the sudden and untimely death of Mr. Maurice Daigle, Regional Administrator of the Districts of Temiskaming and Cochrane. Mr. Daigle was esteemed by those with whom he was associated in the Branch and throughout the Department. Sympathy is also extended to the families and friends of Mrs. Carol Burnett and Mrs. Viola Hutchings, both of whom passed away during the year.

The many tasks of the field services staff could not be accomplished without the help and assistance of municipal and private welfare officials. Their wholehearted co-operation in the past year is gratefully acknowledged.

HOMES FOR THE AGED BRANCH

With a constant increase in the population of the Province and a resulting increase in the number of elderly citizens who require care in their latter years, ways must be found to provide this needed care.

Since 1948, the year before The Homes for the Aged Act came into force, to the end of 1959, there has been an increase of 30.1% in persons 65 years of age and over in the Province. Due to the movement of the population to urban centres and the resulting decrease in size of the housing units, many families, even those with the best will in the world, are no longer in a position to care for their senior members. This is especially true when the senior members become bed-ridden or senile.

The efforts of the Provincial Government, aided by the municipalities and other interested groups to solve this problem, are briefly explained as follows:

MUNICIPALITY OPERATED HOMES

As will be seen from the table entitled "Total Beds including Temporary Beds" there has been an increase of 148.1% since 1948 in the number of beds provided in these Homes. This percentage when compared to the 30.1% increase of the 65 years and over citizens would appear to show that the over-all picture is not bad.

As shown by the table entitled "Summary of Congregate, semi-segregated and segregated care type of Homes" there were in 1948 thirty-four Homes for the Aged, of which one provided bed care. By 1959 there were 51 Homes of which only 17 did not provide separate segregated sections for residents requiring bed or semi-bed care and special care for those who were senile. As of December 31, 1959, exactly 57% of the residents living in the municipally operated Homes for the Aged required either bed or special care.

An examination of the table entitled "Extent of Building Programmes 1949 to 1959 for Municipal Homes for the Aged" will show that the pace of construction of these types of Homes is accelerating. Two new Homes with 436 beds were completed during the year. One of these added to the list of Homes while the other was a replacement on a larger scale of an old Home. Four additions and/or extensions with 213 beds were made to existing Homes. Four complete new Homes were under construction with a total of 758 beds. Three of these will add to the list of Homes, while one is a replacement on a much larger scale of an existing Home. Four additions and/or extensions to existing Homes with 253 beds were also under construction. Plans were being drawn for three new Homes with 493 beds which are replacements on a larger scale of existing Homes. Plans were being drawn for one addition and/or extension to one Home which will give it a further 111 beds. None of the seven Homes which are being contemplated are replacements. They will all add to the list of Homes. Two existing Homes were also contemplating additions and/or extensions.

SPECIAL HOME CARE

Certain persons who are ambulatory and are eligible for admission to a Home for the Aged prefer to live in specially selected private homes in the local community. These are supported in part by the Province and the local municipality and, if need should arise, would be transferred to the local Home for the Aged. At the end of 1959, 141 were placed in private Homes in ten different municipalities.

CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS

The work of the municipally operated Homes for the Aged is complemented by Charitable Institutions. These are governed by various religious, fraternal and other groups. During the year seven new Homes with 594 beds were completed. Four of these were replacements on a larger scale of existing Homes while three added to the growing list of Charitable Institutions. Two additional new Homes with 743 beds were under construction during the year and an addition of 164 beds to an existing Home was also under construction. Plans were being drawn for two complete new Homes with 304 beds. Both of these were additions to the list of Homes. Plans were also being drawn for a 15 bed addition to an existing Home. Two organizations were contemplating building Homes.

ELDERLY PERSONS' HOUSING

A fourth category of government subsidized accommodation for senior citizens is low rental housing for elderly persons. During the year 437 new dwelling units were completed which brought the total number of units completed up to 1,437. New dwelling units numbering 339 were under construction. It will be noted that, during the year, an additional 77% of the units previously planned were either completed or under construction.

SUMMARY

During the year the total number of beds made available for residents in municipally operated Homes for the Aged and Charitable Institutions increased by 759 from the previous year and reached the total of 12,061. The number of resident days in both classes of homes increased by 157,624 to a total of 3,647,576.

The proportion of bed and special-care residents in the municipally operated Homes for the Aged reached 57% as compared to 52.2% in the year 1958 and 50.6 in the year 1957. It is of interest to note that no empty beds existed in the planned accommodation for bed and special care of the municipally operated Homes for the Aged at the end of the year although empty beds did exist in the planned accommodation for normal care and there was a drop of 101 residents in normal care during the year. This would appear to indicate that the supply of beds for residents requiring bed and special care has not yet caught up with the demand.

In addition to the successful efforts being made to increase the number of beds available in the Homes, equally determined efforts are being made to improve the happiness of the residents living in the Homes by means of activities of all types and closer ties between the Home and the local community. Ladies' Auxiliaries to the Homes are playing a vital part in achieving these objectives.

GENERAL WELFARE ASSISTANCE BRANCH

During the fiscal year 1959/60 The General Welfare Assistance Act was administered in municipalities by the local municipal officials whereas in unorganized areas assistance is administered by the Provincial Regional Welfare Administrators.

Municipalities were responsible for only 20 per cent of the costs incurred for General Welfare Assistance. The Province reimbursed the municipalities at 80 per cent with the Federal Government contributing 50 per cent of the expenditure. In unorganized areas aid was paid on a 50/50 basis by the two senior Governments.

The Federal Government does not share in expenditures for medical services, dental extractions, and prosthetic appliances.

In the fiscal year under review improved accounting methods were introduced with the result payments were forwarded promptly to municipalities. This also facilitated the recovery of funds by the Province from the Federal Government, under the Unemployment Assistance Agreement.

Ontario Hospital Insurance coverage was made available to all General Welfare recipients residing in unorganized areas as a charge upon the Province.

Medical

Persons in receipt of assistance are entitled to receive free medical aid from the doctor of their choice, either in their own homes or in the doctor's office.

Dental

Emergency extractions where required, on recommendation of the municipal welfare administrator or provincial welfare administrator, were paid 100 per cent by the Province.

Accounts

There are 937 organized municipalities in the Province of Ontario and of these 841 or 86.9 per cent rendered accounts for the year under review. Out of 30 cities all submitted accounts. Out of 312 towns and villages 275 or 88.1 per cent submitted claims. Of 595 townships 536 submitted accounts or 90.1 per cent rendered accounts. During the fiscal year 841 municipalities submitted accounts compared to the past year's 786.

Expenditures

The gross expenditure for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1960, was $18,712,502, the Province contributing $5,515,452, the Federal Government $9,605,168, and the municipalities $3,591,882. Thus the gross increase ($2,089,127) over the previous year was 12.6 per cent.

Supplementary Assistance

Where there are extenuating circumstances an amount up to a maximum of $20 per month is granted to persons in receipt of Blind Persons' Allowances, Disabled Persons' Allowances, Old Age Assistance or Old Age Security. This assistance was mainly granted where there was a high shelter rate or costly drugs were required.

Number of Persons on Aid — March 1960

During the month of March, 1960, there were 68,274 persons receiving assistance whereas in March, 1959, the number was 65,689, an increase of 2,585 persons.

Prosthetic Appliances

Artificial arms and legs, braces and orthopaedic shoes have been supplied where such appliances were required, the cost being shared on an 80/20 basis with the municipality. The Province paid 100 per cent of the cost in unorganized territory. This type of assistance has helped reduce hospitalization costs. It has also made it possible for many to become self-supporting or to be able to assist in home duties.

Rehabilitation

Following the supply of prosthetic appliances and, where a rehabilitation course is beneficial, the person was trained to enable him to become gainfully employed. This program has shown very gratifying results and many persons previously unemployable have been placed in suitable employment.

Desertion

As in the past and especially in the year under review, constant attention has been given to the matter of desertion. With the co-operation of the municipal officials and provincial police, every effort has been made to apprehend the absconding person with the result a considerable number have been located. Reconciliations have been effected or court action followed through, thereby reducing the number of persons receiving assistance. The number of persons in the desertion category in March, 1960, was 1,852 compared to 1,634 in March, 1959.

Transportation

Financial assistance covering transportation costs has been paid to municipalities where the head of a family has been returned to his place of residence.

Inter-Provincial

Each month a considerable number of persons were repatriated to their provinces of residence with such provinces agreeing to repatriation.

Nursing Home Care

Effective April 1, 1958, regulations were made under The General Welfare Assistance Act, providing aid to indigent persons requiring nursing home care. The Province shared with municipalities eighty per cent of the cost up to a maximum of $80, whichever was the lesser, on the basis that the Nursing Home was licensed under an approved By-law meeting the requirements of the Draft by-law submitted by the Province. A county as a whole may pass the required by-law to cover all municipalities in the county.

This program has been accepted by a number of municipalities in the Province and will expand considerably in the course of the next few months.

The net result of the Province assisting in this program is that the Nursing Homes have been brought up to a higher standard with the co-operation of the medical officers of health, municipal officials and fire marshal.

Immigrants

Assistance was granted to immigrants who had not resided in an Ontario municipality for twelve consecutive months and the cost of aid was shared on a 50/50 basis with the Federal Government.

Economic Reports

Reports were received quarterly from the Regional Welfare Administrators showing the various economic trends throughout the Province.

General Welfare

This Branch continues to review numerous requests from municipalities, other Provinces, welfare agencies, and various departments of the Government for guidance and clearance in matters pertaining to welfare.

Prompt attention is given by our Regional Welfare Administrators to all referrals made to them.

Sincere appreciation is extended to all municipal officials for their co-operation during the past year. Their assistance made it possible for the granting of aid and counselling to persons in necessitous circumstances.

Homemakers' and Nurses' Services

The Homemakers' and Nurses' Service Act was assented to August 1, 1958. This Act enables the Province to share with municipalities the cost of providing essential Home Care Services to families and individuals in the home. Families are assisted to remain together during a period of need or emergency. Elderly and handicapped persons are able to continue to live in their own homes even though requiring specialized care. This can be considered a workable alternative to hospitalization, foster homes or institutional care.

The Province shares with municipalities 50 per cent of the cost in an amount up to $2.50 per visit for nursing services and up to $8 per day or $1 per hour for a homemaker.

These services have proven to be an effective means of maintaining the family as a unit.

WELFARE ALLOWANCES BRANCH

The Welfare Allowances Branch administers four programmes of direct financial assistance on a monthly basis to persons in carefully defined categories. These are: Old Age Assistance for persons in the 65-69 year age group, Blind Persons' Allowances for persons aged 18 to 69 years whose sight is seriously impaired, Disabled Persons' Allowances for totally and permanently disabled persons aged 18 to 65 years and Mothers' and Dependent Children's Allowances for families where there are children under 18 years of age without one or both parents to support them. The Branch is also responsible for the administration of the Province's rehabilitation services programme under which vocational training is provided to persons who are physically or mentally handicapped, where such persons are not otherwise provided with this service.

During the fiscal year ended March 31st, 1960, $34,549,810 was expended for allowances and rehabilitation services, with the Province paying 66.4% ($22,950,777) of the total, the Government of Canada 33.1% ($11,437,712), and the remaining 0.5% ($161,321) being paid by other provinces.

The Province also expended $2,181,642 to provide medical care under the Province's Medical Welfare Plan to recipients under all five programmes and to Old Age Security pensioners (cost: $2,002,683), remedial treatment for the restoration of sight to the blind (cost to Ontario: $2,707), and dental care to children under 16 years of age under the mothers' allowances programme (cost: $176,252). Persons eligible for care under the Medical Welfare Plan were also insured under the Province's Hospital Care Insurance Plan (accommodation at the standard ward level) without having to pay premiums.

Old Age Assistance

Payments, up to a maximum of $55 monthly, were made to an average of 22,561 (an increase of 2.5% over previous year) persons a month during the fiscal year 1959/60. The expenditure for the year amounted to $13,319,645, of which Ontario provided $6,585,032. At March 31, 1960, there were 22,544 recipients, an increase of less than 1% over the number at the end of the previous fiscal year, and representing 13.15% of the estimated Ontario population in the 65-69 age group.

Applications for assistance declined by 9% from the previous year, a total of 7,662 being received. The Branch processed 8,223 applications, of which 86.3% were approved and assistance granted, 11.5% were found to be ineligible, 1.3% were withdrawn and 0.9% were closed because of the death of the applicant.

Blind Persons' Allowances

An expenditure of $1,124,729 was made during the fiscal year ended March 31st, 1960, to provide monthly allowances up to $55 to an average of 1,833 (an increase of 2.2% over previous year) blind persons a month. The federal government provided the major share of this expenditure, with the cost to the Province being $278,880. There were 1,847 recipients at the fiscal year end, an increase of less than 1% over the 1,833 recipients at March 31st, 1959.

Applications were received from 280 persons (a decline of 11% from the previous year) and 320 applications were dealt with during the year. Of these 67.2% were approved, 30.3% were found to be ineligible, mainly on medical grounds, 2.2% were withdrawn and one applicant died.

Disabled Persons' Allowances

The fiscal year 1959/60 saw payments of allowances, totalling $7,745,287, being made to a monthly average of 11,921 disabled persons (an increase of 12% over the average number during 1958/59). The Province provided $3,837,683 of the total expenditure for allowances, which are paid monthly on a means test basis up to a maximum of $55. The caseload continued to rise without interruption, reaching a total of 12,354 recipients at the year end. This was an increase of 7.7% over March 31st, 1959. Applications for assistance declined by 7.4% from the previous year, 4,262 persons having applied for an allowance. Of 5,028 applications dealt with during the year, 48.9% were approved (58.9% approved during 1958/59), 44.2% were ineligible (of these 89.9% failed to qualify under the medical test), 6.1% were withdrawn and 0.8% of applicants died. Allowances were granted to 2,460 persons of whom 25.4% were disabled through diseases of the heart and blood vessels. Mental disorders were the primary cause of disability in 24.9% of the total granted. Tuberculosis was the cause of disability in only 1.1% of cases.

Mothers' Allowances

Expenditures for allowances during the fiscal year 1959/60 amounted to $12,138,215, an increase of $1,104,842 over the previous year. The allowances were provided, by the Province, to an average of 9,507 (an increase of 5.9% over 1958/59) families a month on behalf of a monthly average of 32,955 beneficiaries. The number of cases climbed to 9,722 at March 31st, 1960, from 9,433 at March 31st, 1959 (an increase of just over 3%). During the same period, the number of children increased by 5.1% to 23,790 at March 31st, 1960.

During the year, applications were received from 3,445 persons. Of 3,805 applications reviewed, 60.6% were approved and the remainder were not eligible for an allowance. Disability of the father was the cause of dependency on an allowance in 32.7% of the 2,307 cases approved and 31.9% resulted from widowhood. Desertion by the father and unwed mothers each accounted for 8.1% of the total number granted, followed by 7.1% because of imprisonment of the father. Allowances to foster mothers accounted for 8.7% of the total. In 21.9% of the 755 cases approved because of the disability of the father and his consequent inability to support his family, the primary disability resulted from diseases of the heart and blood vessels. The next largest group (16.4%) was disabled by tuberculosis, followed by mental disorders (15.5%) and diseases of the nervous system and sense organs (13.5%).

At March 31st, 1960, 36.4% of the 9,722 families receiving an allowance had only one dependent child, 25.6% had two dependent children and 16.8% had three. There were five families with eleven or more dependent children.

Except for foster mothers, allowances are provided on a budgetary basis with maximum monthly allowances ranging from $120 for a mother (or father) with one dependent child, to $180 where there are 7 or more beneficiaries. Monthly allowances to foster mothers are provided on a flat rate basis and are $30 for one foster child, $55 for two and $15 for each additional foster child.

REHABILITATION SERVICES

The fiscal year ending March 31st, 1960, marks the fourth year of the vocational rehabilitation program designed to assist physically or mentally impaired persons who are experiencing difficulty in obtaining employment. As in previous years, an increasing number of disabled persons have been assisted in overcoming their handicaps and in becoming self-supporting members of society. In this connection, it is gratifying to note that fifty-five more persons were rehabilitated through training than in the previous year.

Persons who need assistance under this program can apply directly to the Rehabilitation Services Branch, any of the Department's seventeen regional offices, to an approved private agency which provides services for special categories of handicapping disabilities.

Each person who is accepted for assistance undergoes a thorough assessment in order to help him determine the type of training or job for which he is best suited. Medical assessment is obtained through his attending physician, hospital clinic, or rehabilitation centre. Social, vocational assessment and counselling are provided by rehabilitation counsellors of the Branch and in some cases by private rehabilitation organizations, or special vocational counselling services. Many of these were referred for assistance under the Disabled Persons' Allowances Act or other public assistance programs.

During the year enquiries were received on behalf of approximately 800 persons and a total of 578 were assessed in order to determine their maximum potential for employment. Of this number 291 were approved for training by the Selection Committee and 278 applicants actually commenced training. The remaining 287 applicants were either not interested in learning a vocational trade or were not considered to be suitable trainees for varied reasons. Approximately one quarter were placed directly in selective employment after interviewing and counselling. Others were so markedly handicapped by physical, mental or emotional disabilities, extremely low academic education, and lack of appreciable desire and motivation that they were unable to use the services constructively.

A comparison of this year's statistical tables with those of last year indicates that proportionately little change has occurred in the numerical distribution of the various types of categories which have been referred for vocational training. Tuberculosis continues to surpass other disabilities (39.6%). Neurological and neuro-psychiatric disorders combined follow next (23%), with orthopaedic impairments holding third place (20.15%). The co-operation of private organizations, community rehabilitation centres and sheltered workshops has continued to contribute immeasurably to the effectiveness of the Provincial rehabilitation program. While no new centres were established, the existing ones continued to strengthen and expand their services. The new Cardiac Evaluation Unit of the Institute of Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation of Hamilton, the first of its kind in Canada, provides an excellent illustration of one of the most recent developments.

One example of co-operation with private organizations was a survey conducted jointly by the Department and the Ontario Society for Crippled Children of approximately sixty handicapped girls in the 16-18 year age group. This survey enabled the Department to reach a substantial number of girls at an early state in their career planning and greatly facilitated the development of sound rehabilitation programs. Municipalities also have continued to support the provincial rehabilitation program through the provision of supplementary financial assistance and the purchase of prosthetic appliances, the latter on a shareable basis with the Province. During the year, approximately $17,000 was spent by the Province and the municipalities on the purchase of appliances.

The extent to which the vocational rehabilitation program has improved the economic status of handicapped persons and relieved dependency on public assistance can again be illustrated by examining the earnings of the 252 handicapped persons who were rehabilitated into gainful employment.

Practically all the 252 applicants were unemployed when referred for vocational rehabilitation. Over 50% were dependent on some form of public assistance, while approximately one quarter were dependent on parents. It is estimated that at the end of the first year of employment the 252 applicants will have earned $560,000, over twice the entire cost ($249,000) of the program. The average annual earnings of those placed in full-time, competitive employment is expected to be approximately $2,397, while the 27 persons who were placed on sheltered or part-time basis will average approximately $767 per year. Aside from justification of this expenditure on economic grounds, it is beyond estimation as to how much society gains when these individuals regain their respectful status in the community as self-supporting citizens.

INDIAN ADVISORY COMMITTEE

The Indian Advisory Committee met six times officially and once unofficially in the fiscal year, bringing the total of formal meetings to twenty-nine since the first meeting in May, 1955. The Committee maintained the same membership as in the previous year — Mr. Elliott Moses, Chairman, Mr. Webster E. White, Mrs. Benson Brant until her death in May, 1959. Mrs. Brant was succeeded by Mrs. Alfred Simpson of the Mississaguas of the Alnwick Band at the June meeting. Her appointment was confirmed by Order-in-Council on July 9, 1959. Chief Lorenzo Big Canoe of the Chipewas of the Georgina Island Band raised the membership of the Committee to four by his appointment by Order-in-Council on October 22, 1959. This was an important year for the Indian Advisory Committee. Many interesting discussions were held with other departments of the Ontario Government including Education and Lands and Forests, and suitable action ensued therefrom.

Reserves Visited

August 11-13, 1959, Mr. Moses, Chairman, and Mrs. Alfred Simpson attended the 14th Annual Indian Homemakers' Convention held at Christian Island Reserve and both took part in the activities. In November, 1959, Mr. Moses, Chief Big Canoe and Mr. Webster White attended a meeting of Ontario Indians on Indians' rights at Cape Croker.

General Welfare Assistance

On December 1, 1959, Mr. S. N. Asbury was appointed as Executive Officer with special responsibilities in regard to Indians. Mr. Asbury, since his appointment, has made extensive visits to Indian Reserves to obtain necessary information for the implementation of general welfare assistance under the terms of The General Welfare Assistance Act and The Indian Welfare Services Act. In the past three months thirty-three Bands and Reservations have been visited in every part of Ontario.

Liaison Work

In addition, Mr. Asbury was concerned with four other areas of study and implementation of solution to problems on Indian Reserves:

- (a) the economic conditions with a view to increasing the productivity of Indians;

- (b) the educational facilities with a view to implementing greater, better and longer school attendance of Indian children;
- (c) tourist attractions and their possible development;
- (d) liaison between the Indian and the Federal Indian Affairs Branch, Department of Citizenship and Immigration, where applicable.

This appointment as Liaison and Executive Officer, while not an Indian appointment, fulfilled the sixth and final recommendation of the Select Committee on Indian Affairs which had been appointed by the Legislature on April 2, 1953. Moreover, steps had been taken for the employment of a native Indian in the Field Services Branch of the Department of Public Welfare with further such appointments pending.

Federal Brief

The Committee continued its study of The Indian Act and the condition of Indians generally on the reserves with a view to the presentation of its brief to the Joint House of Commons-Senate Committee on Indian Affairs later in the year.

Rehabilitation of Indians

During the fiscal year a survey was made of handicapped Indians on reserves. As a result of this two Indians qualified under the terms of The Ontario Rehabilitation Services Act and completed their training. More such handicapped Indians will shortly commence this training.

In this, the Committee's most active year to date, they continued wherever possible to make known to Indians the many social and economic advantages now available to them in Ontario.

SOLDIERS' AID COMMISSION

Minister of Public Welfare,
Parliament Buildings,
Queen's Park,
TORONTO, Ontario.

Sir:

I have the honour to submit, herewith, the annual report of the Soldiers' Aid Commission for the fiscal year 1959/60.

In making this, the tenth annual report that I have made, I consider it appropriate to go briefly into the history of the Commission.

The Commission was established on the 10th day of November, 1915, with the objective being the very general one of assistance to men returning from overseas. It was soon apparent that these problems were complex and included employment, rehabilitation, family problems and perhaps the most difficult, orphan children. To meet this situation the Act was amended in 1920 to give the Commission all the powers, duties and privileges of a Children's Aid Society with respect to children of men who had served during the Great War in His Majesty's Forces or of the forces of any of the Allies. Under this provision 584 children were committed wards of the Commission. An additional 600 were cared for temporarily because of sickness in the family.

This task was carried out by the establishment of 5 hostels in the City of Toronto. In these hostels the wards of the Commission were housed until foster homes were found for them. In cases where the wards were too old for placement they were educated, given business courses and positions found for them. Many of the girls were married and Mr. Seggie, who is still a valued member of the Commission staff, is said to have walked down the aisle in every church in Toronto to give a bride away.

Originally there were 204 branches of the Commission, local committees of citizens accepting the responsibility for the community work involved with the exception of major centres and in these full time secretaries were employed.

About 1920 or 1921 a Claims Branch of the Commission was established to assist ex-servicemen in the presentation of their cases in claiming pension. This Branch was abolished in 1930 when the Federal Government established the Veterans Bureau.

As the volume of work required of the Commission became less, staff was reduced by transfer to other departments of the Civil Service. At this time the staff consists of: Mr. J. B. Seggie, Mr. R. G. Buchanan, Miss Mary Macaulay.

At this point I digress to express the high regard in which each Commissioner holds the staff. They are painstaking in their work and loyal to their task.

Certain of the Trust Funds handled by the Commission have long since been expended. As of the date of this report five accounts are operated.

No. 8 Account — Kathleen Hammond Fund

This account provides the bulk of the money available to the Commission. The late Kathleen Saunders Hammond left the residue of her estate for the benefit of "young war widows left widowed by the war and in need of help".

Following considerable litigation the moneys were obtained by the Soldiers' Aid Commission. The Soldiers' Aid Commission Act was amended and provided in part—"provided, however, the Soldiers' Aid Commission shall administer and distribute the moneys so received for the benefit of young war widows who were left widows by the war and need help".

The Commissioners have given consideration to the possibility of securing legislation to make this Fund available for assistance to widows of wars other than that of 1914-1918. However, a survey taken in 1957 disclosed that there were in Ontario about 4,500 widows eligible for assistance as the requirement now stands. In view of this large number, legislative action was not asked for.

Since the inception of this Fund, 9,009 cases have been granted assistance to a total amount of $262,237.83.

Grants for the fiscal year ending March 31st, amounted to $10,679.89 resulting in an excess expenditure over revenue of $4,808.05.

The Fund is invested in Government of Canada, Province of Ontario and Ontario Hydro securities and at cost amounts to $176,678.25. In addition, the Commission holds 130 shares of Saskatchewan Land Corporation and 152 shares of Winnipeg Western Land Corporation valued at $2.00 and $3.00 a share respectively.

Scott Estate

In 1916 the late William Scott of the Village of Egmondville directed that $10,000.00 be paid to the Treasurer of Ontario “—to be applied to any purpose the Treasurer may see fit in connection with the present war against Germany—”. By arrangement, the interest on this money amounting to $402.24 this year is paid to the Commission to assist veterans of World War I and their dependents. As of April 1, 1959, this account had a surplus of $663.47. During the fiscal year under consideration grants in the amount of $653.28 were made.

No. 3 Account (General Welfare)

The assets in this account consist of Bonds to the value of $13,065.63 and were derived from the sale of property in Barrie which the Commission purchased in 1934 for a settlement scheme to place veterans on small holdings. The plan was abandoned and the present Commissioners sold the property in 1951.

Grants in 1960 from this account amounted to $300.00.

No. 2 Account

This account, together with No. 3 account, provides the only moneys available to the Commission to assist ex-servicemen and women of other than the first war.

The Commission is given an annual grant of $21,000.00. From this grant the Commission covers administration costs which were:

EXPENDITURES

Summary

Six hundred and fifty-seven applications for assistance were received during the fiscal year. Assistance was granted in five hundred and ninety-three cases in accordance with the following summary:

Emergency Food, Special Diet, Shelter	85
Glasses and Repairs	49
Dentures and Repairs	39
Eye and Medical Examinations	28
Hearing Aids and Repairs	27
Surgical Appliances, etc.	28
Articles of Clothing, etc.	29

Emergent Rent Payments and Taxes	25
Transportation	9
Medical and Hospital Accounts	78
Educational Needs, etc.	11

No. of Grants made	593

The actual expenditure in grants does not begin to indicate the amount of work carried out by the staff of the Commission.

By negotiation with Doctors, Dentists, Optometrists, finance companies and merchants it is usually possible to secure considerable reduction in total accounts. For example, in the month of December, 1958, it was possible to settle indebtedness totalling $2,724.70 at a cost of $1,355.82 to the Commission. An example of co-operation through other Funds is shown by the month of June, 1959, when indebtedness totalling $9,202.29 involved the Soldiers' Aid Commission to the extent of $905.12.

It will be noted that 64 applicants were not granted assistance. This does not mean that they did not secure relief of distress but that the assistance required did not come within the ability of the Commission. These applicants were directed to the proper authority and followed and contact maintained until their problem was taken care of.

The Commissioners wish to record their appreciation of the co-operation of many other Funds, with particular reference to J. J. Ranney of the Army Benevolent Fund. We also express appreciation of the assistance given by Investigators of the Department of Welfare and to the Branches of the Canadian Legion and the Canadian Corps, for the assistance in bringing worthy cases to our attention.

Recommendation

It is considered that the $10,000.00 bond held by the Provincial Treasurer should now be paid over to the Commission to augment the Funds available for assistance to World War I Veterans and it is so recommended.

Respectfully submitted,
T. M. MEDLAND,
Chairman.

IN MEMORIAM

REPORT OF THE DEPUTY MINISTER

Minister of Public Welfare.

In a review of expenditures covering the ten year period ending March 31st, 1961, we find that the Province of Ontario, from its own taxing sources, provided a total of $309,809,000 for welfare and social services. Of this amount $14,660,000, or 4.7% was directed to private charitable organizations and institutions for services rendered to Ontario residents; while 95.3% was paid in the form of public assistance to individuals directly, or through municipalities.

The largest portion of the provincial funds for private welfare has been granted to support institutional services which, in themselves, comprise a significant social capital investment. These private charitable organizations are an essential part of the total social welfare program in this Province and the majority are religious in nature. The major expenditures directed to religious organizations were:

Roman Catholic	$5,546,000
Salvation Army	1,829,000
United Church of Canada	669,000
Other Protestant Groups	948,000
Jewish	393,000

As will be noted, Roman Catholic organizations, with their traditional interest in providing institutional services, received $5,546,000 during the ten year period—as much again as all other religious groups combined.

The favourable capital grants made available by the Province have stimulated activity on the part of religious and other charitable organizations towards constructing new facilities, additional accommodation, and in expanding their programs. Many new privately sponsored homes for the aged have been built; while some of the older homes have been modernized or extended. Most children's institutions, today, are not orphanages, as such. They have been encouraged and assisted to develop specialized facilities and programs and to render recognized forms of treatment through the use of group care. Over the years our charitable organizations have not lost sight of their long term concern for persons who need a helping hand with compassion and understanding.

Almost every type of accommodation is recognized for both capital and maintenance funds. The buildings that are constructed and maintained include: homes for the aged; children's institutions—either of the newer cottage type or the more familiar all-purpose building; homes for unmarried mothers; hostels for transient and homeless persons; and facilities to serve other specialized functions or groups of individuals.

Further recognition is being given this year to elderly persons through the provision of provincial funds under new legislation entitled The Elderly Persons Social and Recreational Centres Act, 1961-62 to assist private organizations in the development and expansion of such centres for the benefit of our older people.

In addition to the religious groups there are other major charitable organizations including the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, the Canadian Paraplegic Association, the Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society, the Canadian Legion, the Victorian Order of Nurses, the St. Elizabeth Order of Nurses, the Ontario Society for Crippled Children and many other social agencies offering specialized services or concerned with the rehabilitation of handicapped persons. Provincial funds in support of the work of the privately incorporated Children's Aid Societies of Ontario, which are autonomous in their formation and function, totalled $28,695,000 during the ten year period. Upwards of 90% of the expenditures of Children's Aid Societies are underwritten by payments from public taxing sources at the municipal and provincial levels of government. The two Schools of Social Work—within the University of Toronto and at St. Patrick's College, Ottawa—receive provincial grants through our Department to support the professional training of social workers.

Voluntary Groups

Some of the most effective private welfare services are made available, voluntarily, by the smaller local church groups, clubs, fraternal societies and other benevolent organizations which frequently provide exceptional help to selected individuals and families. They do so in a quiet, informal and, often anonymous, manner—separate and apart from the established welfare agencies that are operated under community auspices.

While government is assuming very large expenditures in carrying out the necessary continuing programs and services, this multitude of smaller voluntary groups, whether as part of a local church—such as women's societies or institutes, men's clubs and church boards and sessions—or as part of an ethnic society, the Canadian Legion, lodge or local service club—often furnish emergency or temporary material aid or provide special or supplementary assistance to individuals or families where illness, debts, or other misfortune have caused distress. In numbers of cases, too, employment is found for the breadwinner through the efforts of these volunteers.

Many of the persons who are assisted in this way are regularly employed and are able to maintain themselves under normal circumstances. The public authority or even the more highly organized private agency is not always in a position to offer aid to these cases, sometimes because the individuals concerned wish to be treated anonymously. The smaller voluntary organizations provide the assistance when needed. We recognize the value of their timely help and have great appreciation for their dedicated approach. The staff of the Department throughout Ontario maintain a close relationship with neighbourhood groups so that, where there is a likelihood that assistance will be required for an extended or continuing period, such cases may be referred to the Department for attention and consideration.

There is little need to comment in any detail on the role played by the recognized social agencies that are usually members of local community chests. These chartered professional agencies operate specialized services and their activities are well-known to the public.

Some private interests would apparently prefer to have the total welfare responsibility assumed by governments. While questions may arise in an examination of the role of the professional agency or as to the pressure groups that sometimes form a part of community organizations, there can be no question that there is an important and essential place for the neighbourly and informal endeavours of the smaller voluntary groups within the social welfare program of this Province. This is true particularly in relation to assisting individuals or families in temporary distress; in undertaking special welfare projects; and, in some instances, giving leadership in developing neighbourhood services for children, families or elderly persons—all without costly administrative processes.

Ten Year Progress

The past ten years have also seen many notable advances in welfare legislation, both in the progressive revision and up-dating of former measures and in the creation and designing of completely new Acts, with the scope of the services being broadened to treat additional groups of persons. Every area of service, every extension or improvement, every expansion in programs, eligibility requirements and provincial participation, as reviewed within the past decade, have received the approval of the Legislature.

The development of welfare services as a public responsibility has only occurred within the past three decades; and, during that time, the expenditures from provincial taxing sources have steadily increased until, as indicated previously, they reached a figure of almost $310,000,000 for the past ten years, alone. This amount excludes an additional expenditure of 5% representing administration and other minor costs.

Reference has been made, earlier, to the financial recognition that has been given to private charitable organizations—beyond all previous recognition.

The basis for some of our present programs preceded the year 1951, but, since that time, each welfare Act has been amended or re-introduced in a new form, together with the inauguration of the new programs. An outline of the major advances during the past ten years follows:

FEDERAL-PROVINCIAL PROGRAMS

In 1951, in co-operation with the federal government, Ontario passed the necessary enabling legislation and commenced to provide Old Age Assistance to needy persons in the age range 65 to 69 years inclusive.

Allowances for blind persons over 21 years of age were continued—but, for the first time, were established under a separate Act of the Legislature. In 1952 the Province of Ontario inaugurated a program, under its own auspices, to provide allowances to disabled persons—the first Province in Canada to introduce such a measure.

In 1955, the Ottawa Government agreed to participate in Disabled Persons' Allowances. The federal measure was designed from the Ontario Act and disabled persons throughout Canada now benefit from this program.

In succeeding years, the allowances were raised by stages from the original $40 monthly to $46, then to $55 and now to the present maximum of $65 monthly. Income ceilings have also been increased to give greater flexibility; the minimum age limit for blind persons was lowered to 18 years; and the original requirements that applicants must have resided in Canada for 20 years was reduced to 10 years for purposes of qualifying for Old Age Assistance.

Under all three programs the Province, from its own taxing sources, provides for medical services and hospital care insurance coverage on behalf of the recipients. In addition, certain Old Age Security pensioners also benefit from the free coverage provided under Ontario's Medical Welfare and Hospital Care program.

HOMES FOR THE AGED

The historical origins of the present Homes for the Aged Act may be found in the Houses of Refuge Act of 1890 and the District Houses of Refuge Act enacted in 1912.

As time progressed these Refuges cast off the remaining vestiges of their roots in "poor houses" and the congregate care of persons of all ages, and by 1947, when the first Homes for the Aged Act was passed, were well on the way to the development of a specialized program for the exclusive care of elderly persons.

During the past decade, in particular, a vital and vigorous program has been pressed forward in the construction of new homes, the modernizing of existing structures and the development of reactivation programs within the Homes themselves. It is significant to record that, in the ten year period, 26 new Homes were erected, 29 additions were built to existing Homes, while a further eight new Homes and four additions are under construction at the present time. The total cost of this social capital program has reached almost $46,000,000 during the ten year period. Future plans call for six additional new Homes and six extensions to existing Homes.

A geriatrics Research Centre has been sponsored and established by the Department in conjunction with Metropolitan Toronto to assure a high standard of medical care for geriatric patients (particularly those who reside in homes for the Aged). Research efforts are being directed towards the study and development of methods of preventing deterioration in the aging process; improving the physical, mental and emotional fitness of elderly persons; and studies into the causes, prevention and treatment of the diseases associated with later years of life.

As a further adjunct to this on-going research program, the Province, through the Department of Public Welfare, provided a substantial grant for the development of a geriatrics ward in the Toronto Western Hospital as an ancillary service for the persons residing in Homes for the Aged.

CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS

Considerable reference has been made to the private organizations that sponsor and operate charitable institutions in Ontario. It is perhaps sufficient here, to note that a completely new Act was introduced in 1956 to replace the original legislation as enacted in 1931 and amended through 1950.

Under the present Act charitable organizations have been encouraged by generous provincial grants to construct new facilities and expand their programs for the group care of children, youths, unmarried mothers, elderly persons and other special groups. Hostels for homeless and transient individuals and institutions for the rehabilitation and reclamation of persons presenting special problems have also been developed. Over 100 institutions for all the various classes of persons noted above are operated and maintained under The Charitable Institutions Act.

In 1958 an Advisory Committee was appointed to study the standards of care and service provided in charitable institutions for children. The recommendations recently submitted by this Committee propose the design of a new Act to deal exclusively with the institutional care of children. It is likely that such new legislation will be introduced in the coming year to recognize modern practices in group care for children as well as the need to develop various types of institutions to provide specialized services.

ELDERLY PERSONS' HOUSING

In 1952, legislation was introduced to encourage the construction of low-rental apartment units for elderly persons who are able to live normal lives in the community. Since that time the Province has continued to provide out-right grants to limited-dividend housing corporations operated by or on behalf of municipalities.

As of March 31st, 1961, a total of 1,873 dwelling units had been constructed under The Elderly Persons' Housing Act for individuals and married couples; while a further 469 were under construction.

CHILD WELFARE

The present Child Welfare Act, originally passed in 1954, is a consolidation and replacement of three former Acts relating to the protection and care of neglected children—namely The Children's Protection Act, The Children of Unmarried Parents Act and The Adoption Act. The historical origins may be found in the legislation of Ontario as early as 1888.

The delegation of the legislative authority to the privately incorporated and autonomous Children's Aid Societies, as it exists today, has been continued since the turn of the century.

Even since 1954, many amendments to the Act have been made, the most important being the complete re-enactment of the sections dealing with the protection of children born out of wedlock (in 1956) and the adoptions of children (in 1958)—the latter to give complete assurance, beyond any previous doubt, that the adopted child is, for all purposes, in the same position as if he had been born to the adopting parents.

At the same time, the adoption-probation period—i.e., the period of time required to elapse between the placement on adoption and the making of the adoption order by the Court—was reduced from one year to six months. Before 1954, the adoption-probation period was two years.

In 1961, an Advisory Committee on Child Welfare—consisting of 13 persons representative of all facets and interests in the care of children—was appointed and is, at present, engaged in an intensive review of the entire child welfare program in this Province. The Committee has been charged with the task of studying and reviewing:

- (a) the child welfare legislation of Ontario—particularly The Child Welfare Act;
- (b) the administration of the child welfare program—structure, organization, financing;
- (c) the administrative policies and practices of Children's Aid Societies, and
- (d) the child-care practices of and the services rendered by the Children's Aid Societies.

The Committee is to report upon and make recommendations to the Minister and to act in an advisory capacity on any matter affecting the welfare of children.

Since the early part of 1959, the Department has conducted a full-scale adoption advertising campaign, using display advertisements and the classified sections of the daily newspapers throughout Ontario. Children in need of the security of a permanent home are, in this way, brought to the attention of prospective adopting parents. The results have been both amazing and gratifying. Many older and handicapped children, in particular, who might otherwise have faced the rest of their lives without a home or parents of their own, have been successfully placed on adoption; and the campaign is continuing.

REHABILITATION SERVICES

In 1955, the Legislature gave approval to The Rehabilitation Services Act—the first Province in Canada to have such legislation. Since that time, and in co-operation with the federal government, a full range of vocational rehabilitation services has been provided for both physically and mentally handicapped persons to enable them to become as self-sustaining as possible through gainful employment. The full cost of training is paid for by the Province and the Government of Canada and maintenance allowances are made available, where required, while training is in progress.

After several years of negotiations a significant goal was achieved when the Government of Canada passed federal legislation last year entitled the Vocational Rehabilitation of Disabled Persons Act (Canada). The Province now has a firm basis on which to proceed with the advancement of its rehabilitation program, with continuity of federal participation being assured.

A new Agreement has been signed with Ottawa to make possible the development of a more comprehensive vocational rehabilitation program. In addition to the previous and less formal arrangements for federal sharing in the costs of vocational training and maintenance allowances, there is now legislative provision for federal participation in the costs of medical restoration services. Such services may now be supplied to disabled persons to correct or substantially modify handicapping conditions so that they may undertake the type of training suited to their needs and abilities and become capable of pursuing a gainful occupation. These services may include, where necessary, medical examination, assessment and treatment; medically directed services such as physiotherapy and occupational therapy; and the provision of prosthetic and other appliances, as required.

INDIAN WELFARE SERVICES

Following the recommendation of a Select Committee of the Legislature on Indian Affairs (originally appointed in 1953), The Indian Welfare Services Act was introduced and approved in 1955. This Act ensures that the Indian residents of Ontario will receive the benefits available under the welfare legislation of the Province.

In 1959, an entirely new concept was introduced in meeting the local welfare requirements of Indians residing on Reserves who do not qualify for assistance under the special welfare programs. Provision was made, through an amendment to The General Welfare Assistance Act, to recognize the Councils of Indian Bands on the same basis as municipalities. The Bands approved under the Act administer local welfare assistance to their members and are responsible (in the same way as municipalities) for the payment of 20% of the cost.

This notable legislative move to serve Indians has made it possible for them to direct their own affairs, on their own initiative, under the authority of their own elected representatives. Our Indian citizens have responded in a most favourable, satisfactory and responsible manner in administering their own local welfare programs under the Act. At the present time, 37 Indian Bands, located in every part of Ontario, are participating in this program.

CHILDREN'S BOARDING HOMES

The Children's Boarding Homes Act was introduced, for the first time in 1957, to ensure safety of children boarded in private dwellings.

Through a regulated process of registration, specific standards of care and service are required to be met by the persons who board, lodge or care for these children.

MOTHERS' ALLOWANCES

Mother's Allowances come under the direct administration of the Department and are paid entirely out of the funds provided through provincial taxing sources.

During the past decade, the Act was completely rewritten on two occasions—first in 1952 and again in 1957.

Under the 1952 Act, flat-rate allowances were payable to eligible mothers with children under 18 years of age in their care where the mother was:

- (a) a widow; or
- (b) deserted by her husband who had not been heard of for at least one year; or
- (c) married to a husband who was permanently unemployable; or
- (d) divorced from her husband and awarded custody of the child or children—no provision being made or available for their maintenance.

Provision for the payment of allowances on behalf of children in the care of foster mothers was added in 1953.

With the enactment of the latest Act in 1957, eligibility requirements were widened considerably and the previously flat-rate allowances were replaced by provisions for the granting of assistance on a budgetary basis related more directly to the needs of the family.

In addition to the classes of mothers to whom assistance might be granted, as provided in the 1952 Act, unmarried mothers or mothers whose husbands have been imprisoned for six months or more now qualify for assistance. A new feature in the legislation permits the payment of an allowance to a dependent (unemployable) father with children in his care, where such father is acting in place of the mother.

Along with the introduction of the 1957 Act, the program was decentralized for purposes of administration to the seventeen Regional Welfare Offices of the Department throughout the Province. This move was made to give greater flexibility in the more complicated administrative processes and to provide a fuller range of services with a more local approach, in keeping with the characteristic differences in circumstances of living throughout the various areas of the Province.

In addition to the assistance granted for such standard items in the family budget as food, clothing, shelter, utilities and fuel, provision is also made for the inclusion of aid for sundries, life insurance premiums and household maintenance. Medical services and hospital care insurance coverage are also made available, without charge, on behalf of all members of the Mothers' Allowance families.

On January 1, 1959, an Agreement between the Province and the Royal College of Dental Surgeons of Ontario came into effect and dental services are now provided to the children by the family dentist who is paid for his services out of the funds provided by the Province to the College for this purpose.

GENERAL WELFARE ASSISTANCE

An entirely new Act entitled The General Welfare Assistance Act was passed in 1958 to replace the former Unemployment Relief Act which, with amendments in succeeding years, had formed part of the Statutes of Ontario from 1933.

A new principle was established with the provision that all services under the Act may be administered by the County on behalf of the local municipalities.

Seven major and separate classes of assistance are set forth in the Regulations, as follows:

- (a) general assistance to both employable and unemployable persons—including a pre-added budget for food, clothing and sundries (calculated in accordance with the size of the family and the ages of the children); an allowance for special diets, where required; also for fuel—both heating and cooking; and a shelter allowance;
- (b) special assistance on behalf of the persons cared for in hostels;
- (c) post-sanatorium allowances for persons discharged from tuberculosis sanatoria;
- (d) rehabilitation services for unemployed persons;
- (e) incapacitation allowances for special cases of unemployable persons;
- (f) supplementary aid to persons in receipt of assistance under other welfare programs; and

(g) allowances for nursing home care, where the home is licensed under a municipal by-law that requires the observance of the standards set forth in the provincial regulations.

Municipalities are responsible for the administration of all classes of assistance to their residents under this Act. The costs of the assistance granted are shared between the Province, federal government and the municipalities—the latter meeting 20%. The sharable allowances have been progressively increased over the years—the latest and most important increases having been made last year.

Residence requirements have been waived for immigrants who now receive assistance on the same basis as residents of the Province.

HOMEMAKERS AND NURSES SERVICES

A program, that is unique in Canada, is now in effect in this Province. It was brought into being in 1958 with the enactment of The Homemakers and Nurses Services Act.

The Province shares with municipalities in the costs of providing essential home care services (either on the part of homemakers or nurses) as made available to individuals or families. As a result, families are able to remain together when emergencies occur, while handicapped or elderly persons are able to continue living in their own homes even though requiring special care.

About 125 municipalities are co-operating with the Province in this special program.

Special Projects

In the course of the past several months this Department and the Welfare Department of the City of Toronto have been co-operating in two special projects involving staff members from both the provincial and municipal departments. The first project has been established through the development of a Special Investigation Unit to deal with cases of desertion on the part of the breadwinner; while the second is proceeding with an assessment, in some depth, of recipients of General Welfare Assistance who are 50 years of age and over towards ultimate rehabilitation, where such is deemed possible.

It is well known that a deserting husband and father leaves a trail of hardship in the wake of his family. Frequently deserted wives and children have no choice but to appeal for public assistance. With the establishment of the Special Investigation Unit of eight persons last July (1960) certain fruitful results have been achieved. The deserting men are being located in goodly numbers. Direct action is taken, first of all, towards the possibility of reconciliation; and, failing that, the payment of a regular sum for the support of the deserter's family. It is evident, however, that a variety of conditions apply in the treatment of such cases, and, certainly, no single pattern prevails.

So that we might illustrate the services relating to desertion cases the following summary outlines the results in the months of December, 1961 and January, 1962. The cases were drawn from both the General Welfare Assistance rolls of the City of Toronto and the Mother's Allowances program which is under the jurisdiction of this Department:

- (a) 224 cases were referred for review to the Unit in the two-month period;
- (b) in 132 of these cases, assistance was suspended—continuing eligibility no longer being evident; although about one-fifth of the group subsequently re-qualified for aid within the legislative requirements;
- (c) in 40% of the total cases reviewed—where the deserting husband was located—it was possible to make an adjustment in the public assistance budget; and
- (d) as a result, expenditures in the two-month period in relation to these cases were reduced by $25,000.

This saving is substantial particularly when we take into account administrative costs and the fact that some of the deserting husbands, when found, are decidedly lacking in responsibility or are unemployed and without funds to provide any support for their dependents. Nevertheless, it would seem, at this time, we could anticipate a net saving in public assistance expenditures of at least $100,000 in Toronto alone, during the course of a twelve-month period with the continued efforts of this Special Unit.

We intend to expand the work of the Unit to serve the Province as a whole. On the basis of the present pilot venture it would appear that we have good reason to expect that a net and proper saving of $5 of public funds would result from the expenditure of $1 for the administrative costs of the Unit.

While the financial features of this experiment are important we should not lose sight of the fact that the casework services directed to the deserters and their families are proving to be of even greater value. The finding of deserting husbands and the subsequent adjustments that must necessarily be made, both in relation to the man, himself, and his family, are highly involved and time-consuming. In addition to treating the complexities of the family relationships, the Courts must frequently be brought into the picture along with employers and other agencies or persons who are directly or indirectly concerned with the case.

UNEMPLOYED STUDY

The second project is concerned with a provincial-Toronto review of cases where assistance is being granted to unemployed men 50 years of age and over. The main purpose of this study is to consider the potential of these individuals as it relates to the process of rehabilitation—the finding and acceptance of employment, with the use of training or retraining where required.

Every possible step is being taken, in favour of these persons, along the road to their re-establishment and gainful employment. A representative group of 100 persons has now been carefully reviewed. The potential for ultimate rehabilitation in 32 cases seems reasonably good; 15 were limited; while it was considered that 53 had virtually no potential and would be unable to become self-supporting.

Each of these persons received a medical examination. Family background, personal features, social and economic factors were thoroughly considered—and a complete assessment was then made of the potential for rehabilitation and employment. The specialists which consulted with each man had only one main goal in view—to be as helpful, as humanly possible, towards bettering the circumstances of the persons referred to them. Following the series of interviews—wherever there was any hopeful opportunity of placement in gainful employment, either fully or part-time—the necessary action was taken by the staff members of the Unit or through referral to Special Placements Division of the National Employment Services.

Most of the men (84) were faced with medical problems or conditions—35 of them suffering from secondary conditions, as well—many being of a long-standing duration. Obviously these medical problems present handicaps in relation to the potential for rehabilitation and, of course, have actually prevented the acceptance of employment in the past, in numbers of instances. But in certain of the cases with a good potential there was a significant medical problem which did not serve to limit the potential or the motivation of the individual concerned.

Perhaps of even greater importance are the personal and social problems which seemed to plague many of the men in the group. Alcoholism, mental retardation, marital maladjustment and personality disorders were among the major problems presented and, of course, were most revealing in their effects upon past work history—80% of the men having a record of sporadic or unstable employment. A very definite co-relation was noted between the lack of stability and the potential for rehabilitation. The study reveals, clearly, that age, in itself, is not the main barrier to the re-establishment of these men. The age factor is merely serving to aggravate the effects of the unfavourable pre-existing social and personal maladjustments.

One might view the high proportion of "limited" or "no potential" cases in the study as being too unproductive for future activity in this area. Yet these preliminary efforts do point to the fact that there are certain persons, now in receipt of public assistance, who can, with an extra helping hand, be restored to a self-sustaining status and a more fruitful way of life. There is reason to believe that as our efforts are intensified, and as experience is gained, more productive results can be achieved, both directly and indirectly. We hope to persist in all-out efforts to weigh the potential of future groups of persons on the public assistance rolls and do all possible in their favour—particularly at the time of first application for assistance towards preventing the development of a deep-rooted condition of dependency.

AGING STUDY

The Long-Term Study of Aging which commenced in 1959 is continuing. Now at the beginning of its fourth year, this project has aroused wide interest and the men selected for the Study are not only co-operative in their participation but enthusiastic, as well. They represent every walk of life and live in every part of the Province. Many have expressed the feeling that while they, personally, might not profit from the results of this Study, the generations of the future should reap the benefits.

One of the main areas to which specific attention is being directed is that concerned with the anticipation of retirement. It is evident, of course, that leisure, not labour, will be the great problem in the years ahead. Along with the increase in life expectancy there has been a concurrent increase in the number of years that an individual will spend outside the work force. How does one prepare for these added years of non-employment? We are seeking the answers to this vital question through the Long-Term Study.

Almost 90% of our participants already have recreational and other outside interests—a noteworthy fact, in itself. Indeed, each year of the Study has revealed an increasing range of outside interests on the part of these men.

A careful review is also being made of the health factors associated with the aging process. During the past year, while 84% of the men reported that they were in the same state of health as before, 9% said they felt better, and 7% indicated a worsening condition. About 40% of the group are suffering from major health problems; and the five leading causes of their ill-health are as follows: respiratory disorders (21%); musculo-skeletal complaints (13%); accidents (12%); cardio-vascular-renal heart diseases (9%) and gastro-intestinal conditions (8%).

Approximately 22% of the men are considered to have chronic conditions—but not all of them are necessarily severe. An average of 38% each year have failed to visit a doctor for any reason. On the other hand, of those who do consult a doctor, a significant number are simply reporting for a yearly check-up.

Hospitalization was required for 10% of the group—the average stay being 16.5 days. The three leading complaints which called for hospital treatment were gastro-intestinal disorders, heart diseases and accidents. These results are in agreement with the statistics as prepared by the Ontario Hospital Services Commission for males in the age range, 45–49 years, throughout the Province in 1961.

Economic aspects of the Study are being related to the health changes in the participants and, as time proceeds, should yield valuable insight into the relationship between health and socio-cultural patterns. It is too early, yet, to say whether the apparent trends are of a conclusive nature; but because of its long-term nature, the Study lends itself to continuing analyses. It is certain that the Study will provide useful approaches in preparing people to cope with and accept the experience of growing old.

Loneliness and boredom are the twin maladies causing so much havoc among many of our older people. According to a Chinese proverb: "Boredom tires a woman but ruins a man." The often, rather general, public apathy to the effects of the aging process, and, sometimes, to the aged, themselves, can be overcome through the combined efforts of governments, the community, the medical profession, churches and other voluntary groups. The new Elderly Persons Social and Recreational Centres Act, referred to earlier, and passed at the 1961–62 Session of the Ontario Legislature, should serve as encouragement and stimulate activity on the part of voluntary community groups to establish such Centres, in co-operation with their local municipalities—especially Day-Care Centres for elderly persons. A Centre of this type can serve as the focal point in the community for the treatment of the individual needs of older persons. It can be the one central place to which they may go for help with worrisome problems which often become magnified out of all proportion when the individual is left on his own. The Social and Recreational Centre can be the place where the older person finds understanding, a genuine concern for his welfare or companionship, and where he can, once more, develop an active interest in life as a whole.

There can be no question that everyone should live with a purpose. When the older person is denied the opportunity of continuing to earn his livelihood, although willing and quite able to do so, the feeling of uselessness is frequently induced with damaging or deteriorating effects upon his physical and mental health. Our senior specialist in Geriatrics, Dr. Keith Stuart has stated: "Frustration and the sense of being discarded, lost and useless, must be overcome"—by older persons who meet a blockade in continuing their employment. Private retirement insurance plans frequently cause the termination of employment at a specific age—regardless of the skill and ability of the person to continue; and yet, it would perhaps be inadvisable for government to establish industry for the employment of older workers, to operate in conflict with normal business organizations.

It is notable that the self-employed or professional person rarely retires at the age of 65 years—if in good health. Certainly, there is a significant gap between forced retirement and the voluntary withdrawal from active work. Flexibility in retirement policies would take into account the individual's capacity and wishes. It is admittedly true that such flexibility might prove difficult for certain commercial operations; but, although retirement is inevitable, there is an apparent need to recognize unimpaired skills and abilities, despite age.

New problems immediately arise for most persons who lose their employment either as the result of restricted pension schemes or company policies. During the ensuing transition period, part-time or seasonal jobs can be of significant help in making the necessary adjustments to the changed way of life. Several enterprises in Ontario have shown an active interest and have provided leadership in accepting retired workers in part-time and seasonal employment.

One of the most notable examples in these endeavours is the Ontario Jockey Club which has, throughout the years, made use of the services of a moderate number of persons who have been retired from their normal employment. This commendable practice has provided the organization with many mature and capable men who have proven to be most acceptable in the performance of the required duties. This is not to say that all persons so engaged are elderly; but the proportion of older workers strikes a good balance and, apparently, is in keeping with the policy of management.

The social services for older persons can and should be furthered through the use of volunteers from neighbourhood groups, churches, fraternal and other similar organizations. Such voluntary personnel can add much to lonely, frustrated and seemingly useless lives. A recent case coming to our attention points to the need for this approach. A widow, 73 years of age, in good physical health, anxiously stated the desire to move from her apartment to a Home for the Aged because of the utter loneliness with which she was faced. This is not an unusual problem with many unattached elderly persons who live alone in urban areas.

Another communication recently received reads, in part, as follows: "I have kept my troubles so long to myself not knowing that there were people like yourself and others willing and eager to help me that it is hard for me to realize that anyone really cares what happens to me. I don't know just how to say what I want to say. I hope you understand. I am very grateful for your help."

The pity, in cases such as these, is that a number of persons apparently do not come readily to the attention of the persons serving either the public or private agencies.

Unemployment Situation

While the recession of last winter and spring pointed to a substantial unemployment problem, the conditions in Ontario were relatively more favourable than those in the rest of Canada. Expenditures for direct relief to persons residing in this Province reached a gross total of $33,000,000 last year, an increase of 35% over the previous year. Much of this increase, however, was related to the higher sharable allowances in effect during the year.

Recognition of the values in retraining workers has taken firm root. A formal vocational training program for unemployed persons, in general, is proceeding under the sponsorship of the Department of Education in co-operation with the federal government. While this program is, for the most part, restricted to persons with an education of Grade 8 or better, greater attention is being directed by our Department (as indicated previously) towards assisting persons in receipt of direct relief "to get back on their feet" through the use of every possible measure to achieve this goal.

Technical advances are causing shifts in employment opportunities and it is unfortunately true that those who are affected the most are often the least qualified for retraining procedures. Others simply lack the will or motivation to improve their lot in life. Nevertheless, the training and retraining of as many unemployed persons as possible must continue, at an accelerated pace, to prevent the development of chronic indigency.

Hours of work have also shown a constant decline. The current average weekly hours of work of wage earners in Canada in 1960 would appear to have levelled out to 40 hours. In manufacturing, for example, there has been a reduction of four hours per week in the past 15 years. It is difficult, with this evolutionary movement, to anticipate the effects in the future.

An editorial from "The Times" of London, England, of 100 years ago makes this comment in referring to labourers in the building trade who were threatening to strike for shorter hours of work:

"They are wrong in what they aim at, and in the means they take for securing it. That full-grown, strong-bodied men should object to working ten hours a day, when a woman or child works as long, and a poor maid of all work is on her legs from 6 in the morning until 11 at night, is utterly absurd. And, if there were any reason in their claims, the plan of enforcing them by recourse to the tyrannical machinery of 'strikes' would be sufficient to condemn them with moderate, right-thinking men."

It is apparent that strong feelings have been held in some quarters to changes in hours of work which have often been made necessary to assure the distribution of employment as well as to recognize limitations in physical capacities. Beyond all question of doubt, production of goods has advanced despite the decline in the number of hours of employment.

Discussions often relate to the establishment of a minimum wage for men and the amount most frequently proposed is $1.25 per hour. With an average of 40 hours work per week the proposed minimum wage would be $50.00 weekly or about $215.00 per month. The actual take-home pay would probably be somewhat less than this amount because of deductions for unemployment insurance, union dues, contributions to pension plans or other employee benefit programs.

It is of some interest to compare the amounts that may be granted by municipalities for relief to unemployed persons under The General Welfare Assistance Act on a sharable basis with the Province, in accordance with the increases put into effect last year. If, for example, we take a family of five persons, living in a large urban centre—father, mother and three children in the age range 10 to 15 years—such a family would be eligible to receive direct relief and Family Allowance benefits totalling $240 a month. Or, in the case of a larger family, say of 7 persons—father, mother and five children, ages 2, 5, 7, 9 and 11 years—the benefits would total slightly over $280 per month. The amounts of these welfare allowances would seem justified in meeting the minimum needs of these and other families who are dependent upon public assistance.

Children's Programs

While relief assistance for unemployed persons is administered by the municipalities, the Mothers' Allowances program is exclusively treated by the Province. Basically, this is a family program, specifically designed for the benefit of dependent children under 18 years of age. Reference has been made earlier to the legislative advances in Mothers' Allowances over the past 10 years; and, as a result, there has been a constant upward trend in the average case costs mainly due, in recent years, to the more acceptable method of granting aid on a budgetary basis rather than the use of the flat-rate approach. In 1957, just before the new Act came into force, the average payment per case was $79 monthly. The most recent available statistics reveal this average to be $117 per month; and it is likely that this figure will increase further with the contemplated review of the regulations to recognize any changes that might seem desirable.

The other major children's program is administered by the Children's Aid Societies under The Child Welfare Act. Each Society is established as a private corporation under The Corporations Act and, by virtue of its charter, formulates its own constitution and enacts by-laws governing the operation of the Society. The membership of a Society is comprised of private citizens in the community who elect a Board of Directors—and at least one of the Directors is to be a municipal representative. Thus a Children's Aid Society is similar in structure to any incorporated company except that the Legislature has delegated public authority and responsibility in relation to the protection of children from neglect, the care and control of neglected children or those born out of wedlock, the placement and supervision of children on adoption and the discharge of other general functions relating to the care of children.

In the early days of this child welfare program each Society was largely dependent for financial support upon private donations. The reverse, of course, is true, today, with an average of 90% of the expenditures of Children's Aid Societies being underwritten by funds from public taxing sources. During the past year the expenditures of the 55 Societies totalled $14,140,350. In the case of several societies the funds from public sources covered 98% of their expenditures; two Societies derived 26% of the moneys from private sources.

The cost of maintaining wards in the care of the Societies has shown a marked increase, especially since 1955, at which time the average per diem rate was $1.40 as compared with $2.20 for the year 1961. Removing the factor of inflation, there has been a 40% rise in child care costs. On the other hand, despite the growth in the numbers of children in the general population, there has been a decline in the number of children who were made wards of Societies during the past 5 years.

Many of the Children's Aid Societies carry out a most enlightened program of essential services in their communities. The standards of care, service and administrative methods in these Societies are maintained on an excellent and effective level. There are, however, rather wide variations in local policies and practices from one Society to another in relation to the use of foster care, the placement of children on adoption, etc. The studies now being made by the Advisory Committee on Child Welfare should prove helpful not only in bringing about improvements in the program, as a whole, but in achieving a greater measure of uniformity in the policies and practices of the Children's Aid Societies throughout the Province.

The Day Nurseries program in Ontario—both public and private—has proven to be a most advanced service in providing day care for children while the mothers are gainfully employed. All nurseries are required to be licensed and the standards laid down in the regulations must be maintained.

Social Work Training

A unique and active Advisory Council for Public Welfare Training was established during the past year in an effort to do all possible to attract and encourage more persons to enter into the field of Social Work. This Council, headed by Prof. Charles E. Hendry, Director of the University of Toronto School of Social Work, has conducted numerous conferences with federal authorities and with other provincial departments on the problem of increasing the number of graduate Social Workers and towards extending and improving the in-service training programs for the field staff of the Department.

An advertising campaign is being conducted through university publications and a booklet has been prepared for distribution to students in university and high school to call attention to the advantages of Social Work as a rewarding career.

According to a recent announcement, welfare training grants will be made available through the federal Department of National Health and Welfare. The fullest advantage will be taken of these grants to overcome, in Ontario, the effects of a continent-wide shortage of graduate Social Workers and other trained personnel.

The Staff

During the past year, the administrative expenditures of the Department amounted to only 3.2% of the total funds disbursed. This result is undoubtedly related, in part, to the experience of the staff whose rate of turnover (12%) continues to be the lowest of any of the provincial government departments. The functions of the Department of Public Welfare are many and varied and full credit must be given to the Directors of the Branches and to the staff, as a whole, for the faithful manner in which they perform their day-to-day duties.

We are also indebted to the municipalities—and especially to their welfare administrators—as well as to the many private organizations that co-operate so willingly with the Department in so many areas of our work. Not the least of these is the Ontario Welfare Council whose Executive Director, Miss Bessie Touzel, continues to lend her constructive help and wide experience in relation to the development of the total program of the Department.

New Canadians

The interest and concern in the welfare of our New Canadians continues with all necessary help being advanced to those who sometimes meet with adversities. It should be stated that from the day the person or family reaches the soil of Ontario assistance is available if difficulties are encountered.

A number of small voluntary groups of citizens have performed a most humanitarian service in sponsoring and accepting responsibility for certain refugee families during their initial establishment in Ontario. These voluntary sponsors were assured by the Department and the Province that should any of the families fail to become self-supporting, after a reasonable period under the sponsorship of the group, such cases would be considered favourably by the Province for whatever aid might be required. It is noteworthy that no family, sponsored in this way, has sought for or required assistance from public funds.

It is interesting to note, too, that our staff has been augmented by some New Canadians who are maintaining their duties and the services of the Department in a most acceptable and helpful way.

The opinions expressed in this Report are varied. They touch on some views which are considered to be timely although not necessarily in relation to the importance of the large amount of legislation available to serve the residents of this Province. It might be stated that legislation, whether in the welfare field or related to other government measures, is sometimes, of necessity, restrictive in an individual approach. Welfare services are primarily designed to meet the basic requirements of a large number of persons and, of course, must be universal in application throughout the Province.

The pioneering stage is the most important one in the development of new legislation. The success achieved following the introduction of new measures is, in part, largely dependent on the devoted services and the judgment of the key persons charged with responsibility for carrying out the programs. The high degree of the progress accomplished in the Homes for the Aged program has largely been achieved through the dedicated services of Mr. L. Earl Ludlow. Of necessity he had to adopt totally new approaches involving limitless hours of work, personal relationships with municipal authorities and representatives of private organizations. Mr. Ludlow, in the course of a lengthy period of service to the public of Ontario, became one of the best known and foremost public servants. His efforts have served to create one of the finest Homes for the Aged programs on this Continent—a program giving every comfort and honour to elderly persons. We regret his retirement from active service.

We anticipate continued progress during the coming year with further refinements in our services and administrative practices—all designed for the well-being of the people of Ontario.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

JAMES S. BAND,
Deputy Minister.

CHILD WELFARE BRANCH

The end of the fiscal year 1960 completes as a phase a decade of development in the public child welfare services of the Province.

On April 5, 1951, the Minister announced the appointment of a committee to survey the services of the Children's Aid Societies. Ten of the principal recommendations of that committee were:

1. That the Children's Aid Societies of the Province should increase their emphasis on the protection and adoption services and, in the selection of foster and adoption homes, upon the needs of the individual child.
2. That on the Boards of the Societies there should be wider municipal representation.
3. That there should be more secure means of financing protective and adoptive services.
4. That all staff skills and resources be more effectively used and conserved.
5. That in-service training resources be developed.
6. That scholarships to the schools of social work be made available to employees of Children's Aid Societies.
7. That, where possible, the successful practices in the adoption field developing in other jurisdictions be adapted to the Ontario scene.
8. That there should be appointed in the Child Welfare Branch a qualified and experienced adoption worker whose principal effort should be devoted to the development of an inter-jurisdictional programme for the placement of the hard-to-place child.
9. That efforts be devoted to the development of the full public understanding of the functions performed by the Children's Aid Societies.
10. That, through general improvement of the services of the Children's Aid Societies and complementary community services, the proportion of the child population in public care at public expense be effectively reduced.

Guided by the report of the survey committee, a separate committee appointed by the Minister made specific recommendations in respect of legislative amendments which would affect the operations of the Children's Aid

Societies. In consequence of the resulting Child Welfare Act, 1954, being a consolidation of The Children's Protection Act, The Children of Unmarried Parents Act and The Adoption Act and later amendments thereto, the following principal results became apparent over the ensuing years:

1. A sharpened focus on the needs of the child as reflected in the statutes, regulations, administrative procedures and practices made available to large numbers of children the benefits of a more enlightened view and effected considerable reduction in the proportion of the child population taken into the care of the Societies.
2. The financial development of all Societies progressed as, in accordance with a uniform formula, the full cost of children in the mandatory care of the Societies was met by the municipalities which, in turn, were eventually re-imburSED by the Province to the extent of 40%. In consequence, and with the increased participation of the Province to the extent of hundreds of thousands of dollars in the protection programme, the total services of the Children's Aid Societies are now financed from the following sources in the following proportions: municipalities—53%; Province—38%; private sources—9%. This attainment results in part from the recommendations of the 1951 committee in respect of a more adequate financial structure.

The validity of the summary presented in the report for the fiscal year 1959 which is here again set forth has, during the year just passed, become more evident.

- “1. The child population continues to rise at a rate much greater than that for parents and others responsible for the care of children.
2. The proportion of the child population in the care of welfare agencies continues to decrease.
3. The response to treatment, as the core of children in need of these services hardens, becomes ever less rapid and, in consequence, the average length of stay increases steadily.
4. The services demanded for this hardening core are becoming increasingly specialized, intense and expensive and tend to require more institutional settings.
5. The institutions consistent with this trend are, with a few notable exceptions, focussing their services on a reducing number of children who develop more effectively within an institution than within a private family, and upon those children who require specialized, intense, often long-term and expensive care which is in many ways characteristic of hospital services.

6. For the following reasons:

- (a) the increasing need for specialized services,
- (b) the increase in basic costs of living,
- (c) the increase in the child population, and
- (d) the reducing proportion of taxpayers in the total population, the weight of child welfare on the individual ratepayer is becoming increasingly intense."

Throughout the year the relevant questions apparent in the foregoing summary have received the attention of a competent committee charged with the study of the institutional services available to children.

Finally, as the goals set ten years ago are attained, or with the changing times become inappropriate, requests continue to arise for a study which will examine basic rights and responsibilities as between parent and state and such questions as integration and co-ordination in welfare administration, all with a view to more appropriate and efficient public child welfare services.

DAY NURSERIES BRANCH

During the past five years the number of nurseries under supervision has grown from 291 to 372. The steady increase in the number of nurseries has placed heavy demands on the field staff, but their work has been lightened by the excellent co-operation of nearly all nurseries in meeting and exceeding the minimum standards of the regulations.

AMENDMENTS TO THE DAY NURSERIES ACT

This year has been one of transition in the administration of the Day Nurseries Act. Amendments passed in the legislature setting a fee for licensing and changing the date of expiry of licences from May 31st to December 31st make it difficult to prepare statistical reports which are comparable to previous years. Another amendment relieves private schools offering the entire elementary school program from the necessity of obtaining a licence for their nursery and kindergarten programs. Under this amendment, fourteen centres were removed from supervision.

RISING STANDARDS

It has become apparent that many nurseries are no longer concerned merely to reach the legal minimum standard, but are anxious to offer the best possible program for pre-school children. One evidence of this desire is that enquiries for short courses are continually being received. Various branches of the nursery education association throughout the province have sponsored such courses from time to time with very encouraging results. In the summer of 1960, McMaster University inaugurated a six weeks' course in Pre-school Education, planned in conjunction with the Nursery Education Association of Ontario. This course is intended as the first part of a three-part course to be given eventually at various universities in Ontario. It will attract a mature group of women who would not likely be able to take the longer courses offered at the Institute of Child Study at the Ryerson Institute of Technology.

As the supply of Canadian trained nursery personnel does not meet the demand, we owe a great debt to the young women coming to Ontario with training from early childhood from the United Kingdom, and many European countries as well as the United States. This branch has endeavoured to assist in their placement in suitable positions.

Another evidence of the desire for higher standards of service to the public is the increasing attendance at the annual convention of the Nursery Education Association of Ontario. This year it was held at MacDonald Institute in Guelph, and approximately 300 nursery personnel from all over Ontario attended, nearly fifty percent of those engaged in the work.

PRE-SCHOOL PARENT CENTRE

The Pre-School Parent Centre, operated by the Nursery Education Association of Ontario with some financial support from this department, has found that it has been able to be very helpful to parents in overcoming the universal difficulties associated with the rearing of children. By letters and interviews it reached many parents with timely advice and practical suggestions for giving their children the best possible chance to develop normally.

DAY NURSERIES

The day nurseries have continued to demonstrate that under the proper circumstances working mothers can, if necessary, maintain their homes without harmful effects on the children. As an example, in the day nurseries operated by the City of Toronto, over sixty percent of the mothers are the sole support of their children. These mothers would be in receipt of welfare allowances if they were not gainfully employed. They work free from worry, knowing that their children are thriving under the trained supervision in the nurseries. These mothers thus become accustomed to self-support and keep up to date the skills required to earn their living as their children grow older. Thus the public funds used to subsidize the nurseries are regained in decreased welfare costs in later years.

During this period the City of Toronto opened Dovecourt Nursery Centre, combining the Bonar and College Street nurseries. Dovecourt Nursery Centre occupies the second floor of the West Branch Office of the Toronto Welfare Department, in premises especially constructed as a nursery. The rooms are bright and spacious. A roof playground affords a highly satisfactory arrangement for safe play under crowded city conditions.

CO-OPERATIVE NURSERIES

The co-operative nursery continues to be an interesting development in the nursery field. In Ontario it has climbed from one-sixth to one-fifth of the total number of nurseries. In the neighboring state of Michigan co-operative nurseries represent half of all nurseries, whereas farther west in Illinois they are a rarity. The co-operative nursery makes extraordinary demands on the supervisor. She has the dual task of planning a suitable program for the children and of giving the mothers the necessary skills to enable them to act as her assistants in the carrying out of the program. The rewards for staff, parents and children in the co-operative nursery are correspondingly great. Mothers feel that the skills they learn in the nursery give them greater confidence in home guidance. The children flourish in an atmosphere where mothers and teachers work in harmony, and the teachers have the satisfaction of knowing that their influence on the children is being carried right back into the home. They also gain confidence from working in close partnership with the mothers.

APPRECIATION

Our thanks are due to the municipal officials, particularly those in the fire and health departments in the one hundred and two municipalities in which nurseries are located. They have given helpful advice and supervision to the nurseries and unfailing courtesy and co-operation to our staff in our joint endeavours to assure good care to the ten thousand young children in the Ontario nurseries.

FIELD SERVICES BRANCH

Services provided by Field Services Branch continued to increase during the year 1960-61 but the rate of expansion has slowed down. At the beginning of the new fiscal year the total number of active and pending cases had increased by slightly less than 2% compared to a 4.5% increase in the previous year. Disabled Persons' Allowances were up about 6%; Mothers' and Dependent Children's Allowances, 3.5%; and Old Age Assistance had decreased about 1%. The total caseload increased in all but five of the regions.

The five Northern Regional Offices serving the territorial districts experienced considerable extra work during the winter and early spring months in the administration of General Welfare Assistance to persons in areas without municipal organization. In addition to the lack of employment opportunities in several sections of the North, there were many persons who had not worked for a sufficient number of days during the year to establish eligibility for unemployment insurance. In three of the regions it was necessary to add extra staff to cope with those applying for and receiving General Welfare Assistance.

The total active caseload of field workers increased from 51,014 on March 31st, 1960, to 52,024 on March 31st, 1961. The comparative figures for each of the four major Welfare Allowances programmes were as follows:

	March 31st 1961	March 31st 1960
Old Age Assistance	24,880	25,056
Blind Persons' Allowances	1,964	1,949
Disabled Persons' Allowances	14,345	13,538
Mothers' Allowances	10,835	10,471
TOTALS	52,024	51,014

The so-called "hard core" or "multiproblem" families receiving public assistance, and particularly those in which there was desertion and other socially unacceptable behaviour, received special consideration during the year. The success achieved in locating fathers who had deserted their families has been notable. When these men are located steps are taken to reunite them with their families or, if this is not feasible, to obtain financial maintenance for the family through the Family Courts.

Toward the end of the fiscal year plans were made to co-ordinate the activities of the Department in this field in a Special Investigating Unit. Such a unit will enable the Department to take more effective action against the growing number of married men who seek to avoid their responsibilities by deserting their wives and children. It appears also that there are an increasing number of fraudulent applications for public assistance in which persons, under false pretenses, try to obtain public funds to which they are not entitled. Such cases will be referred to the Special Unit for thorough investigation.

The Field Staff are now engaged in completing the third-year interviews of the Long-Term Study of Aging. In conducting these interviews each year the staff is becoming more aware of the difficulty of maintaining the interest of a proportion of those participating in the study. They have found that the summaries of results to date which they have received and coverage of the study in the press have been most helpful in this regard.

The Field Staff made 236,074 calls during the year serving the general public and other Branches of the Department. Of this number, 200,372 were related to the four major Welfare Allowances programmes and 35,702 concerned General Welfare Assistance, Rehabilitation, Child and Family Welfare, and miscellaneous services. The total number of calls increased from 230,976 last year.

The average annual cost per call or visit, exclusive of salaries, remained at 82c, the same as the previous year. The average monthly caseload per worker increased from 396 to 406.

Efforts have been continued to help recipients of Mothers' Allowances to become self-supporting wherever possible. During the year the employment potential of various kinds of institutions has been stressed. The institutional field offers a variety of positions with minimum qualifications where recipients of Mothers' Allowances may be employed without additional training.

For those receiving Mothers' Allowances desirous of re-establishing themselves in full-time employment but who lack the necessary skills to compete in the labour market, vocational training is encouraged and arranged. Courses in such vocations as nursing assistants and hairdressing have been most fruitful in preparing recipients for full-time employment and self-support. Continual emphasis is being placed on employment and rehabilitation as a better and more rewarding means of livelihood than public assistance.

Progress also was made during the year in reducing the volume of paper-work by simplifying the procedure used to notify regional offices and field staff of all new grants and changes in the amounts of assistance or allowances. These are now posted from a copy of the orders authorizing payments or changes rather than from copies of letters to recipients. This new procedure has resulted in greater accuracy and has reduced the staff time required for posting by an estimated 40 per cent. Other changes in procedure are being studied to eliminate duplication wherever possible.

In their day-to-day operations the personnel of the Field Services Branch depend to a large extent on the helpful co-operation received from municipal and private welfare officials in all parts of the Province. Without mutual understanding and a readiness to assist one another in providing public welfare services to the people of the province the many and complex tasks of the Field Services Branch could not be accomplished.

GENERAL WELFARE ASSISTANCE BRANCH

During the fiscal year 1960-61 assistance under The General Welfare Assistance Act and regulations was administered by the municipal officials and in unorganized areas by the Provincial Welfare Administrators.

Municipalities were responsible for 20% of assistance issued for General Welfare Assistance. The Province reimbursed the municipalities at 80%. The Federal Government contributed 50% of the expenditure.

In unorganized areas the cost of assistance was shared by the two Senior Governments on a 50/50 basis.

The Federal Government does not participate in expenditures for medical services, dental extractions or prosthetic appliances under this programme.

MEDICAL

Persons in receipt of General Welfare Assistance continue to be covered for medical services from the doctor of their choice in the home or in the doctor's office.

DENTAL

Emergency extractions on recommendation of the municipal welfare administrator were paid in full by the Province.

ACCOUNTS

In the fiscal year under review there were 937 organized municipalities in the Province and of these 839 or 89.5% submitted accounts.

Included in the above were 30 cities and all submitted accounts.

There were 313 towns and villages in the Province and of these 278 or 88.8% submitted accounts, and of 594 townships 531 or 89.4% submitted accounts. In the previous year 841 municipalities rendered accounts whereas in 1960-61 there were 839.

EXPENDITURES

The gross expenditure for the fiscal year ending March 1961 was $23,750,261, the Provincial share being $8,450,733, the Federal Government contributing $10,715,728 and the municipalities $4,583,800. The gross increase over the previous year was $5,037,759 or 26.9%.

SUPPLEMENTARY AID

Assistance under this category was paid to persons in receipt of a Governmental Benefit such as Blind Persons' Allowances, Disabled Persons' Allowances, Old Age Assistance or Old Age Security.

Such assistance was granted mainly where there was high shelter costs or costly drugs.

The maximum amount payable was $20.00 per month per person.

NUMBER OF PERSONS ON AID

In the month of March 1961 there were 93,764 persons receiving assistance whereas in March 1960 there were 68,274 showing an increase of 25,490 persons.

PROSTHETIC APPLIANCES

Various types of appliances such as artificial legs, arms, braces and orthopaedic shoes were supplied to persons requiring this type of assistance. Also rehabilitation courses were provided where necessary. This programme enables some persons to be released from Hospital and others to accept gainful employment. The results to date have proved most beneficial as a rehabilitation service.

DESERTION

Constant attention has been given to the case of desertion on a Provincial and Municipal level.

Every effort was made to apprehend the absconding person with good results with the assistance of the Municipal and Provincial Police.

Reconciliations have been effected and where necessary Court action has been taken. This procedure has resulted in reducing the number of persons receiving assistance. The number of persons in the desertion category during March 1961 was 2,215 whereas in March 1960 there were 1,852.

TRANSPORTATION

In conjunction with the municipalities transportation costs were paid on an 80/20 basis for a person or family being returned to place of residence outside of Ontario. The costs of returning deserting heads of families were shared on the same basis.

INTER-PROVINCIAL

A considerable number of persons were repatriated to the Province of residence during the past year following agreement by the other Province.

NURSING HOME CARE

Assistance under this type of aid is shared by the Province with the municipality on an 80/20 basis up to $100.00 per month. This programme continues to expand. The net result enables a person to be released from Hospital and receive adequate care under proper supervision. The officials of the municipalities with Medical Officers of Health and Fire Department Officers, bring the standards of the Nursing Homes in Ontario up to a higher level.

The Nursing Homes are periodically inspected by a representative from this Branch who submits reports and makes recommendations where applicable.

IMMIGRANTS

Assistance was granted to immigrants in the same manner as to other citizens.

The Province and the Federal Government paid the cost of assistance on a 50/50 basis until the person or family established 12 consecutive months' residence in an Ontario municipality.

ECONOMIC REPORT

Quarterly reports were received from the Regional Welfare Administrators which outlined the economic trend in various larger municipalities.

GENERAL

General Welfare Assistance was granted during the past year to persons in necessitous circumstances and the Branch has endeavoured to help all needy and worthy cases. Where necessary investigations were carried out and also persons assisted in obtaining gainful employment.

Numerous requests were received from municipalities, other Provinces, Welfare Agencies and various Departments of the Government for guidance and clearance pertaining to welfare in general. These all received immediate attention.

All referrals to our Regional Welfare Administrators also received prompt attention.

To all municipal officials is extended grateful appreciation for their co-operation during the past year. Their assistance has made it possible for the issuing of assistance and also counselling to various persons in necessitous circumstances.

HOMEMAKERS' AND NURSES' SERVICES

Assistance under The Homemakers' and Nurses' Services Act has increased as the municipalities are making greater use of this programme.

Where a homemaker is necessary the Province pays the municipality up to $8.00 a day or $1.00 per hour.

Nursing Services are paid at $2.50 per visit.

The Province and the Municipality share the cost on a 50/50 basis for expenditures under this programme with no subsidy paid by the Federal Government.

There is no doubt that this programme will increase as it is definitely a benefit to persons requiring this form of assistance. Not only does it allow a family to remain together it also enables the head of the family to continue in employment.

HOMES FOR THE AGED BRANCH

Progress in the care being provided for the aged under three Acts continues to be well maintained. There has been progress in the provision of beds, progress in the number of Homes providing fully segregated care, progress in medical care, progress in the study of geriatrics, progress in activities for residents, progress in re-activation and progress in the building of Elderly Person's Housing Units.

This progress, due to the efforts of the Provincial Government, municipalities and other interested groups, is discussed under the following headings:

MUNICIPALLY OPERATED HOMES

There has been an increase of 10.4% in the number of beds during the year and an increase of 173.9% since The Homes for the Aged Act went into effect in 1949.

Three new Homes providing fully segregated care for 539 residents were added to the growing list of Homes during the year. Another 235 beds were added to existing Homes and, by means of an addition, one semi-segregated care type of Home was converted to a fully segregated care Home.

Attention is drawn to the table entitled "Extent of Building Programmes 1949 to 1960" which shows 8 new Homes and 4 additions and/or extensions under construction. Plans were also being drawn for 2 more Homes and 4 additions and/or extensions.

Previous year's Reports have emphasized the growing need for providing beds for those requiring bed, semi-bed or special care. To meet this demand 73.2% of the new beds added during the year were of these categories.

CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS

Complementing the work of the municipally operated Homes for the Aged is the excellent assistance being received from the Charitable Institutions. These are operated by various religious, fraternal and other groups. They receive Government assistance, both for capital and maintenance costs.

During the year under review three complete new Homes, with a total of 269 beds, were completed. Also, during the year three complete new Homes, with a total of 863 beds, were under construction. One of the latter was a replacement of an old building. Additions and/or extensions to two existing buildings, with a total of 221 beds, were under construction. Plans were being drawn for an addition and/or extension to an existing Home which represents another 15 beds. The construction of three complete new Homes was also being contemplated.

As will be seen by the above figures, the work of the Charitable Institutions is progressing steadily.

ELDERLY PERSONS' HOUSING

The Provincial Government also provides a subsidy to encourage low rental housing for elderly persons. During the year under review 436 new dwelling units were completed and a further 469 were under construction. The rate of progress in the construction of these dwelling units is accelerating in comparison to previous years. These dwelling units are filling a great need and, as fast as they are completed, are immediately occupied.

SUMMARY

Additional beds added to Homes for the Aged, Charitable Institutions and Elderly Persons' Housing during the year under review totalled 1,948. If, to these figures are added the beds in the three categories of housing under construction during the year, the figure increases to 5,676. This is more than the total population of the Town of Dunnville.

The Provincial Government is not only encouraging housing and the physical and medical care of elderly persons but, what is of equal importance, is encouraging in hundreds of ways the little things which, added together, go to make up a complete and happy life for the residents. Among these may be mentioned Tuck Shops operated generally by the Ladies' Auxiliaries where, in most instances, the residents can invite their guests to have a cup of tea, hobby rooms and instructors in all classes of activities, entertainments, libraries, chapels and the provision of religious services of various denominations, etc. These and many others are, in a large number of cases, serving to re-activate the resident and bring back the joy of living.

Expenditures during the year ended March 31, 1961 exceeded $30 million for the several programs administered by the Branch. This included payments for old age assistance, blind persons' allowances, disabled persons' allowances, mothers' allowances, rehabilitation services and medical and dental services. As shown in the following table, approximately 69% of the costs of the programs was borne by the Province.

TABLE

Source of Funds	Allowances and Rehabilitation Services	Medical and Dental Services	Total Costs	Percent
Ontario	$24,064,829	$2,297,510	$26,362,339	68.8
Government of Canada	11,806,050		11,806,050	30.8
Other Provinces	159,807		159,807	.4
	<hr/> $36,030,686	<hr/> $2,297,510	<hr/> $38,328,196	<hr/> 100

Recipients of allowances who were eligible for care under the Department's Medical Welfare Plan were also insured under the Ontario hospital plan. Premiums for Hospital Care Insurance, providing standard ward accommodation, were paid by the Ontario Government.

OLD AGE ASSISTANCE

An average of 22,647 persons a month during the fiscal year received payments of assistance up to a maximum of $55 monthly. Expenditures for the year amounted to $13,365,352 of which Ontario's share was $6,616,367. At March 31, 1961 there were 22,736 recipients, an increase of 192 over the number at March 31, 1960 and representing 13.09% of the estimated population in the 65-69 year age group.

Applications were received from 7,283 persons, a drop of 4.9% from the previous year. The Branch processed 7,909 applications, of which 86.3% were approved and assistance granted.

BLIND PERSONS' ALLOWANCES

Allowances totalling $1,126,647 were paid during the year ended March 31, 1961 to an average of 1,841 blind persons a month. The cost to the Province was $278,935. There were 1,845 recipients at the fiscal year end, compared with 1,847 recipients at March 31, 1960.

Applications were received from 267 persons, a decline of 4.6% over the previous year. Of 308 applications dealt with during the year, 60.1% were approved, 35.7% were ineligible for an allowance, and of these 72.8% were not blind in the degree required by the regulations.

DISABLED PERSONS' ALLOWANCES

Allowances amounting to $8,357,172 were paid to a monthly average of 12,916 disabled persons (an increase of 8.3% over the average number during 1959/60). Ontario's share of the expenditure was $4,139,787. Allowances, paid on a means test basis up to a maximum of $55 monthly, were provided to an increasing number of disabled persons. The caseload at March 31, 1961 reached 13,307, an increase of 7.7% over the number at March 31, 1960.

Applications for an allowance were received from 4,147 persons. This was a drop of 2.7% from the number of applications received during the year 1959/60. Of 4,959 applications processed during the year, 52.7% were approved for payment.

MOTHERS' ALLOWANCES

Expenditures for allowances during fiscal year amounted to $12,877,725, an increase of $739,510 over the previous year. Allowances were provided to an average of 9,836 families a month on behalf of a monthly average of 34,509 beneficiaries. The number of cases increased to 10,149 at March 31, 1961 from 9,722 at the previous year end. This was an increase of 4.4%. The number of children was 25,049 at March 31, 1961.

A total of 3,289 persons (a decline of 4.5% over the previous year) applied for an allowance during the year ended March 31, 1961. Of 3,731 applications dealt with, 63.7% were approved for payment of an allowance. Disability of the father and widowhood was the cause of dependency in 63.1% of the cases granted. At March 31, 1961, 36.2% of the 10,149 families receiving an allowance had one dependent child, 25.3% had two and 16.8% had three dependent children. There were eight families with eleven or more children.

Allowances to mothers and dependent fathers are provided on a budgetary basis ranging from a monthly maximum of $120 where there are two beneficiaries, to $180 for seven or more beneficiaries. Allowances to foster mothers are provided on a flat rate basis and are $30 a month for one foster child, $55 for two and $15 for each additional foster child.

REHABILITATION SERVICES

The basic task of the rehabilitation program is to help disabled persons offset their handicaps and provide opportunities for them to obtain suitable employment. Rehabilitation counsellors of the Department assist the handicapped to determine the kind of work they can best do, to develop through vocational training the ability to do this work and to locate the job that matches this ability.

To ensure that these services are provided for as many of the handicapped as possible an extensive case finding system has been developed in co-operation with a great variety of public and voluntary organizations such as the Ontario Society for Crippled Children, the Rehabilitation Foundations for Poliomyelitis and the Orthopaedically Disabled, the Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society, The Canadian National Institute for the Blind, the Canadian Hearing Society, community rehabilitation centres, municipal departments of public welfare, Department of Health and National Employment Service.

During the past year the number of handicapped persons referred by these and other organizations has increased from 578 to 850. During the same period 403 applications were approved for training 387 persons actually commenced courses of training. Approximately 72 persons were placed in employment without training while another 240 were placed following training. As in previous years a substantial number of persons referred for assistance were found to be so seriously disabled as to preclude any possibility of employment placement.

A comparison of this year's statistical tables with those of last year reveals a marked similarity in the distribution of the various categories of disabilities. However, there are two noteworthy exceptions in this comparison. They are the categories of tuberculosis and neuro-psychiatric disorders. For the first time, persons suffering from neuro-psychiatric disabilities have become the largest single group (28%) receiving services, while persons suffering from tuberculosis have declined to 20%.

Despite the encouraging growth and development of the rehabilitation program and the relatively high proportion of persons successfully rehabilitated following training (78%) several problem areas have emerged. One relates to the mentally retarded. While the provision of educational facilities has experienced a remarkable expansion during the past few years, the point has not been reached where any significant number of mentally retarded have been enabled to obtain substantially gainful employment. While the relatively high level of unemployment and long term trend toward automation have reduced employment opportunities, the most important single factor is that the more seriously retarded are just not capable of sufficient productivity to earn their living. Here the sheltered workshop has an important role to play and the recent establishment of twelve new sheltered workshops by local branches of the Ontario Association for Retarded Children is making a most useful contribution to the rehabilitation of mentally retarded young adults.

Another problem area concerns the mentally ill. A recent study of a group of 150 mentally ill persons provided with courses of vocational training showed that only about 40% were successfully trained or placed in employment. While this 40 per cent success rate more than justifies the financial expenditure involved, this experience would seem to indicate that in rehabilitation of the mentally ill, the major job to be done is in the pre-vocational stage. Standard vocational training has an important contribution to make toward the rehabilitation of a small select group of mentally ill persons discharged from hospital but for the great majority vocational training does not provide the answer. For these rehabilitation is dependent upon a variety of other medical and social services.

The extent to which the vocational rehabilitation program has improved the economic status of handicapped persons and relieved dependency on public assistance can again be illustrated by examining the earnings of the 240 handicapped persons who were rehabilitated into gainful employment. Practically all the 240 applicants were unemployed when referred for vocational rehabilitation. Over 42% were dependent on some form of public assistance, while approximately one-third were dependent on parents. It is estimated that at the end of the first year of employment the 240 applicants will have earned $587,298.00, over three times the cost of the $190,435.25 involved in their training. The average annual earning of those rehabilitated is approximately $2,447.07. Aside from justification of this expenditure on economic grounds, it is beyond estimation as to how much society gains when these individuals regain their respectful status in the community as self supporting citizens.

INDIAN ADVISORY COMMITTEE

The Indian Advisory Committee is a group formed to consult with the Minister of Public Welfare on services to Indians. It met five times officially and twice unofficially in the fiscal year, bringing the total formal meetings to thirty-four since its inception in May, 1955. The Committee maintained the same membership as in the previous year, namely, Mr. Elliott Moses, Mr. Webster E. White, Mrs. Alfred Simpson, and Chief Lorenzo Big Canoe.

A general meeting with the Chiefs of Indian Bands was held on February 7th, 1961. This was marked by the attendance of Senator James Gladstone, the only Indian Member of the federal government.

FEDERAL BRIEF

The Committee presented its brief to the joint House of Commons-Senate Committee on Indian Affairs on May 18th, 1960. The entire Committee appeared in person and the report was presented by Mr. Elliott Moses, Chairman. This is considered to be one of the most important steps taken by the Committee to date and the brief met with a most favourable reception.

GENERAL WELFARE ASSISTANCE

On April 1st, 1960, a plan was inaugurated to extend General Welfare Assistance to Indian Bands under the terms of The General Welfare Assistance Act and The Indian Welfare Services Act. The Indian Band is considered to be of the same status as a municipality in its administration of a welfare program. The Band Council receives applications for relief and issues funds according to need. The senior governments then reimburse 80% of the expenditures.

Within 6 months of the opening date 18 Bands had been approved for inclusion in this new arrangement and as of March 31st, 1961, there were 30 Indian Bands taking part. At the end of the first year's operation the total expenditure for welfare purposes by the Bands was $88,112 and the provincial reimbursement was $70,079. There were then 1,132 Indians on Assistance.

REHABILITATION OF INDIANS

Under the terms of The Rehabilitation Services Act of Ontario 5 Indians received vocational training and financial assistance. A further 9 persons were re-trained as automobile mechanics through the relief program and obtained permanent employment.

CONCLUSION

The extension of General Welfare Assistance to Bands, together with the activities of the Advisory Committee, has made this a year of practical contribution to the well being of Indians. In the welfare field, they have gained the responsibility of managing their community affairs and the same degree of discretion and financial aid accorded to municipal governments.

SOLDIERS' AID COMMISSION

To: The Hon. Louis P. Cecile, Q.C.,
Minister of Public Welfare,
Parliament Buildings,
TORONTO, Ontario.

Sir:

In submitting the auditor's statement and my report on the operation of the Soldiers' Aid Commission I rely on statistics. If you wish to have a more detailed explanation I will be happy to prepare it.

Number of applications received—685.

Total dollar aid to veterans and dependants—$18,384.36.

Total indebtedness relieved by co-operation with other funds $26,233.20
at an expenditure of $4,568.20.

Total indebtedness relieved by direct negotiation with creditors $5,843.14
at an expenditure of $3,150.12.

The Commissioners are also Trustees of the Ontario Canteen Fund and comparable figures for this Fund are:—

Number of applications received—1,557.

Total dollar aid to veterans and dependants—$54,309.78.

Total indebtedness relieved by co-operation with other funds $15,783.92
at an expenditure of $5,741.72.

at an expenditure of $4,856.38.

This indicates that ex-service men and women in Ontario have been relieved of distressing debts in the amount of $129,914.83.

We record our appreciation of the co-operation received from other organizations and from the medical and dental professions, finance companies and merchants generally without whose sympathy and understanding this would not be possible.

The major fund at the disposal of the Commission is the trust created by the Will of the late Kathleen Hammond and which amounts to $181,979.52. There are between 3,500 and 4,000 widows residing in Ontario who come within the terms of this trust.

There are approximately 250,000 veterans of World War I in Canada. Based on enlistment percentages this would mean that about 100,000 reside in Ontario. Their average age is 68. Of this number 11,010 veterans are in receipt of War Veterans Allowance and 6,709 widows. Approximately 19,000 World War I disability pensioners reside in Ontario.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

T. M. Medland,
Chairman.

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE DEPUTY MINISTER 1961-62

To: The Honourable Louis P. Cecile, Q.C.,

Minister of Public Welfare.

Welfare programs have evolved in the past few decades out of a variety of causes. The persons who require care and treatment within the terms of welfare legislation usually suffer a breakdown in their personal circumstances—often it is the lack of the means to maintain themselves as a result of short or long-term unemployment.

There has, of course, been a marked change in family living. In the past years, many houses accommodated three generations of the same family in the midst of a community of relatives and neighbours who supported each other during periods of distress. Today's urban living is largely restricted to bungalows or apartments with little or no room for the aged or handicapped members of families and less disposition on the part of the community to give personal aid or attention to those who suffer reverses. Indeed, a different set of values has been adopted in this respect, especially on the part of younger persons.

Public welfare services and funds have had to keep pace with this social development as well as in response to a greater public understanding of the requirements of certain individuals and families who, in earlier years relied upon uncertain resources to cope with their needs or to fend for themselves.

An amazing expansion in a wide range of services has occurred in the past four decades. Only Workmen's Compensation, Houses of Refuge and efforts to protect children, together with some endeavours on the part of private agencies, preceded the introduction of Mothers' Allowances legislation in 1920. Poor relief through local municipalities was made available to a very small proportion of the population. Today, through one or other level of government, almost every condition of dependency is recognized and public funds are provided to ease the resultant distress.

The prominent types of difficulties and conditions involving persons who are eligible for public assistance include:

- unemployment
- automation
- old age
- ill health, including acute and chronic illness of a physical or mental nature, or both
- widowhood
- marital discord, including desertion, separation and divorce
- alcoholism
- easy credit
- lack of education or skilled training
- housing
- teen-age marriages
- children born out of wedlock
- juvenile delinquency
- parental delinquency
- child neglect
- chronic destitution.

The word "problem" is, today, one of the most overworked words in common usage. Every difficulty—every unhappy or improper circumstance—every unsuitable condition, attitude or approach on the part of individuals and families who come to the attention of public and private welfare agencies is referred to as a problem. In recent years, a more fancy designation has appeared, and frequent reference is now made to "multi-problem families". But some authorities consider such terms as serving only to stigmatize the individuals concerned. Perhaps more important is the fact that such a designation tends to promote a negative approach. We need to consider the difference of the approach that starts with the designation, "multi-problem family" as opposed to that which looks upon the family as one that has encountered multiple problems. With the focus of attention upon the family or individual, the problem providers can be identified and the necessary treatment commenced according to the nature of the cause or causes.

Public welfare departments, at all levels of government, constantly meet with the conditions of dependency, poverty and other personal or social breakdowns. Because of this fact, welfare departments are sometimes viewed as being associated with these conditions and, in the minds of some persons, seem to serve only to perpetuate the exigencies. It is obvious, of course, that a welfare department does not cause the conditions that demand treatment; but, it is evident that, in the administration of welfare programs, today, there is a primary need to revise our thinking. It is not enough merely to maintain persons on public assistance. Increasing efforts must be directed towards re-establishing individuals and families on a self-supporting status within their communities, wherever this is remotely possible.

Constant studies are under way to determine the causes of dependency or poverty in relation to individual cases in order that the persons concerned may be helped, in every way, towards an independent way of life. It is clear that the generalized treatment of cases within most of the municipal relief programs has failed to be as effective as it might be in identifying the root causes of the conditions applying, and in taking all possible action to promote the development of the fullest possible measure of self-sufficiency in the persons concerned. Prevention of dependency and the re-establishment of persons are of greater importance, at this time, than any other steps which might be advanced in favour of those receiving public assistance.

It is recognized that a substantial number of persons will continue to be eligible for various forms of public assistance because of the very nature of their circumstances. Some causes of dependency are largely irreversible—such as those resulting from the process of aging, or from severe mental and physical disabilities. There is, however, a large group of persons who, with the concentrated efforts of public welfare authorities, can be re-established into full or part-time employment. In addition, there are numbers of cases where wives and children have been deserted and where additional direct steps can be taken to cause the responsible men to provide for their families. In this area, in particular, it has been demonstrated that all-out efforts and persistence are effective.

In the course of the past year, the Department has directed staff and time to the carrying out of several research projects, through arrangements with the Department of Public Welfare of the City of Toronto. I am outlining these projects in some detail because they point to the values obtainable in a process that clearly identifies cases and causes. By way of comment, I should say that the results exceeded all expectations and these methods should prove to be important administrative supplements throughout the Province.

LONG-TERM FAMILY CASES

A project to review long-term family cases was carried out jointly by the Provincial and City of Toronto Departments of Public Welfare. A member of the Provincial staff was in charge of the operation. The study involved a comprehensive review of families, who had received direct relief for more than twelve consecutive months. They were considered to have well-established dependency patterns. Two hundred cases fitting this description were selected, at random; one hundred were retained as a control group, while the other hundred cases came under the active treatment of the Service Unit established for the purpose.

The objectives of the Unit were:

- (1) to take all possible steps on behalf of the one hundred treatment families in order to bring about improvements in their economic, health or social conditions; and
- (2) to measure the effectiveness of the concentrated services which may normally be rendered by the staff of a welfare department.

In both the study and control groups, one-quarter of the cases had employable heads of families; while the remainder were classified as unemployed.

The project lasted for six months, by that time, it was found that 42 cases from the study group no longer required relief assistance. Within the control group, only 23 cases had been dropped from the rolls. There is a variety of reasons why the cancellation of cases in the study group was affected; but it is to be noted that 21 of the 42 obtained employment either on their own initiative or with the help of the Unit; 9 cases requested cancellation, themselves, or reported that they were now self-supporting; 3 were found to be not eligible because of income that was not revealed at the time of acceptance of the case; and 9 cases were found to be eligible for a more permanent type of assistance (8 being transferred to Mothers' Allowances and 1 to Workmen's Compensation).

It is most difficult to provide an estimate of the resultant financial savings. The incidence in cancellations in the treatment group, however, were more than double those in the control group. The additional cost of the Unit was, of course, offset many times over by the re-establishment of the substantial percentage of the families and their removal from the public assistance rolls. Notable is the fact that these were long-term public assistance cases and their potential for continuing indefinitely on the rolls was a significant possibility.

The procedures in the project consisted in identifying lengthy, costly cases and then directing treatment in a concentrated all-inclusive manner. Each and every case in the study group obtained collateral benefits which resulted in better social and health conditions. This study has been of exceptional interest because most large welfare offices have been geared to maintain a generalized service largely limited to the provision of maintenance.

One of the most prominent features in the interviewing process was that of creating healthy attitudes on the part of employable persons in order that they might seek and obtain employment. It is true that some of the men who secured work were assisted in doing so by the Unit; but, on the whole, a larger number found jobs for themselves. The field workers devoted as much time to each case as was warranted, covering all aspects, including the economic, social and health features. The purpose was largely that of endeavouring to bring about a replacement of dependent attitudes, on the part of the individuals served, by the adoption of more constructive approaches, self help and a restoration of belief in themselves.

Many of the cases who had become dependent were convinced in their own minds that they were not in any position to take the initiative. Some believed that they had no ability to help themselves. Yet, as will be seen in the case illustrations that follow, certain persons merely required assurance that jobs were available and that they were quite capable of maintaining their own families.

The first is the case of Mr. H., 34 years of age, with a wife and four children all under the age of 4 years. This family had been in receipt of assistance for a total period of almost three years. Mr. H. had a history of "a chronic back condition" which was serving to keep him from accepting employment of any kind. The field worker maintained a sustained relationship with this case over a period of two months during which arrangements were made for medical examinations and consultations with the National Employment Service regarding work possibilities.

After a comprehensive medical assessment the man was classified as unemployable, at the time; but it was stated that if rehabilitation efforts were made on his behalf, such action would probably result in most of his trouble being eradicated, as "it is largely a state of mind". With considerable encouragement on the part of the field worker and the dispelling of fears, both real and imaginary, Mr. H. began to make determined efforts to find work.

Employment was finally obtained with a Cartage Company where, surprisingly enough, he was required to drive a truck and move furniture. When asked by the field worker as to the present condition of his back, Mr. H. replied that he now felt "on top of the world".

The second is the case of a family of five—man, wife and three children ages 9, 7 and 5 years—with a public assistance record of over three years. The man was unable to read or write, had done only casual work and had a police record. With the help of the staff of the Unit the man began to recognize his responsibility as head of the family. He seemed to be much encouraged by the interest being taken in him. He was instructed to keep a record of his job-seeking attempts and within a relatively short period of time obtained full-time employment with a Transport Company.

Another family was comprised of a man and wife, who had married later in life than usual, with one child 2 years of age. The wife was pregnant at the time the case was brought forward for special attention by the Unit. Assistance had been in pay for more than two and one-half years because of the medical history of the man which indicated chronic neuritis, general debility and chronic rheumatism. He was classified as only partially employable. In working with the man, the staff found that he was immature and was inclined to push the responsibility of supporting the family towards his wife.

He was advised to register for employment and within a comparatively short period of time suitable work was obtained for him. Later reports indicated that he was continuing with his employment with encouragement from his wife.

In assessing the potential employment of cases, a considerable number were found to have severe personal deficiencies and inadequacies so that the goal of independence for them seemed most unlikely. It is apparent, in the cases described below, that constant, costly procedures will have to be continued to bring about some betterment in their circumstances. These persons are the victims of their own inadequacies. Crises and reverses seem to be an accompaniment of their mode of living. In the very nature of their limitations, expenditures to support these persons will likely increase rather than decline.

The case of Mr. Z., who is 32 years of age, with a wife and four children, is illustrative of this point. Thirteen interviews were recorded during the project.

Mr. Z. has a poor work record. The longest period he has ever held a job is six months. The five-year record on file describes him as "evasive", "lacking grit and determination", "unco-operative", "irresponsible", and "alcoholic". He has shown no marked tendency to improve and has developed an almost hypochondriac outlook. Numerous medical examinations, however, have indicated that he is employable, at least for light work.

In order to motivate Mr. Z., the case was transferred to the temporary issuance list and he was required to register at the National Employment Service each week and to visit the welfare office each time further assistance was required. He was also instructed to keep a record of his job-seeking attempts. He was given employment leads, only some of which he followed through.

The family went through a number of emergencies during the project review: (1) the daughter, aged 12 years, who was attending the Mental Health Clinic, was charged with being involved in stealing a bicycle; (2) there were arrears of rent; (3) payments on household appliances became overdue; (4) the man deserted a few days before Christmas, 1962 with the family's assistance cheque and returned home with less than half the original amount; and (5) the situation will undoubtedly be further aggravated with the arrival of an additional child early in 1963.

At no time has Mr. Z. given any indication that he recognizes or appreciates what is required of him in order to achieve independence for himself and his family or even that he wishes to achieve it.

Some parents because of lack of knowledge, illness, discouragement, mental defects, economic pressures or housing seem to be incapable of performing their roles as homemakers.

Miss G. is an unmarried woman with three children. Application for assistance was first accepted in June, 1957. When the staff member of the Unit visited the home, deplorable housekeeping conditions were noted. The worker subsequently telephoned the Public Health nurse and was informed that the family was well known to that office; but that it had not been possible to obtain any co-operation.

Apparently at one time the family was being treated by the Children's Aid Society but the case was no longer active, there. The family was finally moved by the Welfare Department and for a time the new accommodation was kept neat and tidy. Three months later, however, this lady moved herself back to her previous quarters, although not to the same apartment. It is evident that if constant supervision is not maintained the situation will deteriorate.

The next case illustrates the complete acceptance of public assistance as a way of life.

Mr. L. is 45 years of age with Grade 9 education, with a wife and five children. Assistance has been in pay since January, 1958. Thirty-four interviews were held during the course of the project. It is evident that Mr.

L. has renounced the generally accepted concept that the husband and father is responsible for the support of his family. In fact he seems justly proud that he has been able "to support" his family through the method of public assistance. Mrs. L. made the comment to the worker that "the worst thing the Department ever did was to give my husband his first welfare cheque". Cheques are now issued in the wife's name as Mr. L. showed complete irresponsibility in handling the funds.

On most occasions, Mr. L. is unshaven, he does not use his dentures, his oldest clothes are worn when making calls on potential employers despite the fact that he has been provided with clean clothing in good condition.

Efforts to get employment for Mr. L. have proved to be abortive. He refused two jobs found for him during the course of the project, on grounds of feeling "sick inside". He was always prepared to call on firms to look for work—some such alleged calls were verified—so long as none appeared to offer possibilities of employment.

Other plans put into effect to motivate this man included reporting to the National Employment Service every morning at 9 a.m.; reporting to the District Welfare Office every alternate afternoon; and keeping lists of his calls on employers. The main reason advanced by Mr. L. for refusing the jobs found for him was ill-health; but upon medical examination it was determined that he is fully employable apart from heavy manual work. Concentrated efforts were still being advanced at the conclusion of the project, but there seemed little hope of effecting any appreciable change in this man's attitude towards life on the relief rolls.

SPECIAL UNIT FOR MEN OVER 50 YEARS OF AGE

The Department embarked on another joint venture with the Welfare Department of the City of Toronto to assist older recipients of General Welfare Assistance. Men over 50 years of age, who had been in receipt of assistance for varying periods of time, were interviewed by a medical examiner and two rehabilitation officers.

This continuing program has a twofold purpose:

- (1) to learn more of the characteristics of these men and to find some useful method for rating their employment potential; and
- (2) to show, on the basis of experience, that age need not be a critical consideration in hiring a man and that a significant number of older males on public assistance may be rehabilitated to their own and the community's advantage.

Along with these aims, there was the extension of other necessary social and medical services wherever needed. Members of the staff of the two Departments screened all cases carefully and in as helpful a manner as possible. At first, recipients were chosen in the proportion 60 per cent "unemployable" to 40 per cent "employable". Gradually selection was refined.

The result of the activities of the "Over 50 Unit", to date, have exceeded all expectations and border on the remarkable. Close to one third of the men interviewed (360 by December, 1962) were placed in employment, either permanently or temporarily. Follow-up studies in the coming year are planned to evaluate the overall accomplishments.

It is evident that the interview itself has been of effect in raising the self-esteem of the men. A notable proportion secured jobs on their own initiative after the interview. This is particularly significant when it is seen that several of them had been on General Welfare Assistance for more than one year. In other instances the supervisor of the "Over 50 Unit" and the City of Toronto's Rehabilitation Unit were chiefly responsible for the placements. The part played by the National Employment Service in this project has been disappointing.

The men placed in employment have reported average wages of $252 a month, and have entered mainly into service, construction, manufacturing and mechanical occupations.

In terms of education and training, this group was certainly more at a disadvantage—55 per cent having less than Grade 8. Determination of "good" potential seemed to hinge upon four factors: a moderately good educational background, a good work history, a stable marital life, and no more than one socio-medical problem. Where the latter condition did not hold true, assistance was obtained under other programs, provincial or federal. Training, treatment and special counselling were also made available to about 15 per cent of the men.

The approach taken in identifying this particular group and in providing specialized services will continue. The provincial personnel used in this study will be made available to other centres in an effort to afford opportunities in the screening of cases and in the placement in employment of men over 50 years of age who are now in receipt of public assistance.

DESERTION

A third special project operated jointly by the Provincial and Toronto Welfare Departments is related to the matter of desertion, and the treatment of the families affected. Desertion, which basically involves the abandonment of family responsibilities, is an all too common type of misconduct in our society. The conditions which lead to desertion on the part of husbands and fathers develop out of many causes; but the effects of this cowardly act often leave wives and children stranded and dependent on the community.

In establishing a Special Investigating Unit to deal with desertions, the first step is always directed towards the location of the man. It is significant that men have been found in 41 per cent of the 1,634 cases referred to the Unit, to date. As a result, 320 families no longer required public assistance. In 273 cases, the men were required to appear in Court and almost 200 of these were ordered to provide maintenance for their families. Reconciliations were effected in 19 instances.

Time consuming efforts are involved in the majority of these cases—in locating the deserting husband; in taking the necessary actions which must follow; and in rendering services and maintenance, where required, to the families. It is not believed that the incidence of desertion is increasing; but, nevertheless, new occurrences are consistently brought to our attention. The establishment of this Special Unit has been of decided value in preserving public funds. The persistent efforts on the part of the staff of the Unit are achieving results. This specialized service is now being made available to the Province as a whole.

GERIATRICS RESEARCH UNIT

The Department inaugurated a continuing research project pointing to the identification and treatment of the ills of elderly persons. A Committee of outstanding medical specialists was formed, some three years ago, headed by Dr. W. W. Priddle. At the same time, a Centre was established in collaboration with Metropolitan Toronto, with all necessary facilities, to maintain progressive research into all aspects of aging.

Residents of Homes for the Aged in the Toronto area have benefited greatly from the constructive health measures and medical services continuously being rendered by the thirteen specialists, along with other highly skilled services. The findings and recommendations of the Centre are being made available to Homes for the Aged throughout Ontario.

The specific and varied studies relating to the medical treatment of elderly persons are too numerous to mention here; but six important papers have been published in a variety of Medical Journals. The services developed by this Centre are proving to be of outstanding value to the field of Geriatrics, a science devoted to the treatment of elderly persons who are subject to the disorders of the aging process.

Every facility, including the establishment of a new ward in Toronto Western Hospital for the treatment of acute health conditions, is co-ordinated with the Centre and is made available for this most important research project.

LONG TERM STUDY OF AGING

In 1959, a sample population of 2,000 men began participating in a study to review the changing social, economic, and health conditions in the lives of the middle-aged breadwinners of this Province. Government, with established staff, record-keeping facilities and other administrative services is in an ideal position to initiate and encourage such research.

With the passing of time this study is assuming greater importance. It is certain that many established views on aging will have to be reconsidered in the light of these original investigations. While our attention is naturally being focused on the 1860 men still in the study, I should remark, in passing, that even those who drop out are providing valuable information on the rates of geographical mobility of various sub-groups; on the loss of interest of participants in longitudinal studies of this nature; and on the causes of deaths (not merely the pathological features but the associated socio-economic factors).

A great deal of attention has been devoted to the construction of interview schedules. Most of the questions require specific answers but a number of "open-end" questions permit both participants and our own field workers to reveal attitudes. Each year, forms used in the interviews cover certain basic features as well as treating one or more different specialized areas. In one year, preparation for retirement was selected; currently, patterns of family life are being explored.

Highlight reports have been published to date and have proven of much interest to all workers in the field of aging. The first dealt with the health condition of participants and it is remarkable that a high proportion of the men have "good" or "excellent" health. Illnesses do, of course, occur, and it is their incidence and development in relation to other aspects of the men's life situations that are of concern.

The second report was concerned with income levels, employment and pension coverage. One of the several comments received was from a professor of social medicine at a leading Scottish University. He wrote: "Among the many headings that interested me was pension plans and retirement savings. Your Table . . . showing coverage by income group comes as something of a shock to people like me who have grown used to virtually complete coverage—but much more important is the effect this lack of coverage will have on retirement plans and patterns. I do envy you the opportunity to follow these men through and, as always, I wish the Study well."

Actually two-thirds of the participants do have pension plan coverage, usually under company-sponsored contributory schemes. While teachers, military personnel, and the judiciary are, as might be expected, completely covered by superannuation, self-employed farmers, small merchants, and persons in several other occupations are not so well safeguarded.

Protection in the form of general and prepaid health insurance is available to the majority of men. Such was the case at the start of the study in 1959, although a few participants have reported increased coverage. Approximately 90% of the men have general insurance; about 70% have medical insurance; 98% have Ontario Hospital Care Insurance, with about 30% of these having supplementary in-hospital benefits.

In connection with the continuing employment of the total group, it is significant that very few of the men have been displaced from their occupations. When any of the men have transferred from one job to another it invariably has provided for a betterment in their earning capacity.

In the area of social activities (whether personal hobbies or clubs of which the men are members) there was again a clear-cut relationship between the number of such activities and income groups. Individual diversity was very marked when we consider the types of interests. A 28-part classification of recreations and activities has been devised for use in the study, and covers such items as: Alcoholics Anonymous, cooking, Boy Scouts, Rotary, members of School Boards, curling, hiking, church leadership, beekeeping, Federation of Agriculture, bingo, labour unions, archaeology, Chambers of Commerce, gardening, TV viewing and others. Altogether a total of 6,837 social or recreational activities was reported—or an average of 4.3 per participant. Since retirement is now a realizable expectation for nearly everyone, these facts are of great interest for the future.

These men have been participating in the Study of Aging for 5 years. It is anticipated that notable changes will occur in the economic, social and health circumstances especially when these men attain the age of 55 years (in the tenth year of the study).

This very large random sample, which covers every County and District in Ontario, is under the direction of the Department's gerontologist, Mr. Lawrence Crawford and is receiving much attention both in the Province and elsewhere.

CHILD WELFARE SERVICES

With the appointment of the Minister's Advisory Committee on Child Welfare, it follows that the activities of children's aid societies have come under review. A member of the staff has been designated to carry out some research in depth, particularly with reference to the treatment of the children in care. The data and findings arising out of this research project are, of course, being made available in their entirety to the Child Welfare Committee which is headed by Mr. Charles J. Foster. Undoubtedly, the survey will prove to be helpful to the Committee for their deliberations and the recommendations that will be made.

The preliminary findings are concerned with the numbers of placements of permanent wards in foster homes. A random sample of 186 such children was selected and, based on the existing experience, it appears that one out of every three permanent wards can expect to be placed five or more times in the care of various foster parents. Only one in six cases in this review had remained in a single foster home.

The treatment of the multitude of social ills which cause children to become, in effect, the wards of the population at large—family disintegration, abandonment of parental responsibilities, sheer neglect and the like—is far from an easy task. But it is frightful to consider that when a child is taken into permanent care by society he may face, if he is not placed on adoption, the deteriorating experience of being moved, time and again, from one set of foster parents to another.

At one period, orphanages provided continuing care for such children; but, in this process, it was gradually realized that too many children were failing to respond to community life and, in fact, were frequently branded as less desirable children. It is questionable, however, as to whether this incessant shuffling of children in care from one foster home to another is not inflicting greater damage on some children. Perhaps we should be giving recognition again to the development of group care facilities, on a smaller scale than in the past, for certain children who find it difficult to adjust to normal family life.

The finding of permanent homes by way of adoption continues to be the most constructive approach and we are hopeful that, when the report is submitted by the Committee on Child Welfare, the recommendations will point to ways and means of bringing about a sharp decline in the number of children taken into care in the first instance; and, where society must take over responsibility for a child, that firmer steps will be taken to prevent multiple foster home placements.

The children's aid societies who are directly responsible for the treatment of the children in their care, are fully aware of the complications in establishing their wards in foster homes. There are many reasons which interfere with the continuity of the stay and, of course, there can be no guarantee that any one of these children will remain in a single household during his childhood.

The Association of Children's Aid Societies can undoubtedly lend much valuable advice and assistance in countering the turnover of children in foster homes. The Executive Secretary has indicated his full support towards a study of this question within the Association.

It should be added that some Societies have been most successful in their efforts to restrict the numbers of placements of their children and the methods they use can be of benefit to the field as a whole.

COUNTY WELFARE CONSOLIDATION

Much discussion has taken place in the past few years in the matter of establishing larger administrative units for welfare purposes. Legislation is now available to permit local municipalities to transfer their welfare responsibilities to a county administration. It is readily conceded that small rural municipalities have difficulty in giving the necessary breadth of services to their cases. The acceptable approach today is that of assuring proper standards of assistance and the carrying out of rehabilitation and restorative measures.

The County of Wentworth is the first of Ontario's counties to establish a consolidated welfare service. The organization and development is being guided by a senior officer of the Department in collaboration with the welfare committee of the County Council. It is our view that this administrative unit is proving to be most successful in every detail. All favourable features have been adopted on behalf of the individuals and families who require public assistance. When the transfer of responsibility from the local municipalities to the County was being made it was found that several cases were eligible for other forms of aid and were thus removed from the local relief rolls.

It is felt that in taking this step, the collective local municipalities within the County of Wentworth are adopting a modern approach which will ease the administrative pressures on them, individually. At the same time, the cases qualifying for the variety of municipal welfare services are reaping the advantages of this consolidation.

SUBJECTS FOR RESEARCH IMMEDIATELY PENDING

(1) Intake Procedures

Discussions with Welfare Commissioner Robena Morris of the City of Toronto would point to a joint endeavour in which intake procedures will come under review. This will be a study of the process at the point where applicants first apply for aid, with consideration of the basic causes that bring applicants to our public welfare offices and the verification of the information submitted.

It is known that a large percentage of new applicants and those who re-apply, seek financial aid for comparatively short periods of time. It is also apparent that the greatest opportunity for constructive help and for re-establishment is afforded within the first three months that public assistance is being provided. Some individuals or families require a relief grant to maintain them until jobs are available. Other cases arise as a result of acute illness or from some temporary marital disagreement.

It is certain that favourable and timely adjustments in the initial stages can serve many new applicants and thus prevent long-term dependency. The possibility that the issuance of the first welfare cheque may be the first step towards a dependent life can never be ignored. We have given much attention to what we should do for people; but perhaps we need to examine more carefully what we do to some people when we encompass them within our public welfare programs.

(2) Young Applicants

A further project will look into the reasons why young applicants, both married and single, require public assistance and what kinds of services might best resolve their difficulties. Again, we have, here, a group whose economic, social and health conditions are likely contributing to their dependency. Such a study may offer solutions for the specialized treatment of these cases within our current economic climate.

DAY NURSERY EXPANSION

In today's industrial age, women are taking a prominent role in the labour market. In Ontario records point to women comprising 30% (or 692,000) of the total work force. Each of the past three years has shown a one per cent increase in the number of women workers. Thus their role as employees is becoming of greater importance. Needless to say, a considerable proportion of the women engaged in employment are married and have dependent children who are cared for in a variety of ways while the mother is absent from the home.

The demands for day nursery care have been on the increase. The number licenced at present is 360; while five years ago the total was 318. Day Nurseries for pre-school children have proven to be of great value in permitting mothers to accept employment and at the same time assure that the very best of care is available for their children. But beyond this, the programs of the nurseries themselves are usually of marked help in preparing children for school, in creating healthy attitudes and a favourable social climate among the children. Great advances have taken place in this special field of child care and training—all to the advantage of the children concerned.

In Ontario, we have excellent legislation under The Day Nurseries Act to provide for the care of pre-school children. Thirty of the nurseries are publicly operated—and in these cases, the Province shares the costs on a 50-50 basis with the municipalities in which they are located.

Ontario's Day Nurseries Act is a model of its type in establishing standards, program and supervisory services. It is notable that Ontario is one of only three public authorities on the continent sharing in the costs of a day nursery program.

These Day Nurseries provide an essential service, and even greater facilities, particularly in the public field, seem to be desirable. A study will be commencing shortly which will give greater understanding in creating additional facilities—particularly in the areas where women represent a high percentage of the work force. Certain large industries that engage a goodly proportion of women workers will be approached to see whether some of them might consider operating day nurseries within their own organizations. In this way a direct service might be made available with advantages to both employers and employees.

INCREASED FACILITIES FOR THE AGED

Treatment and services for the older people of this Province continue to absorb our attention. It is evident, in the light of the large expansion in the numbers of elderly persons exceeding the age of 65 years, that greater facilities are required to assure well-rounded services for this group. The care and maintenance of elderly persons in the form of direct allowances or by way of provincial subsidies and grants are subjects for constant review; but more than that, many—especially those living in the community—require social and recreational outlets and greater recognition in the area of personal services.

Homes for the Aged give outstanding specialized care and attention to the elderly—particularly for those who are single or unattached and who cannot live on their own in the community. The residents benefit from the activities and programs organized within the Homes. In this way, the one great scourge which affects so many older persons—that of loneliness—is eliminated.

Similar activities and constructive associations are lacking for many elderly persons who live in the community. They frequently have few or no outlets to occupy their time and, in many cases, become withdrawn to the point of apathy. Churches and private organizations are in a favourable position to develop services and programs for the aged. This is a field of activity which provides unique opportunities for religious and private endeavours. Yet there are insufficient efforts being directed by such groups to this important area of service.

Numbers of older people fail to become identified with private groups or churches and it would seem that neighbours and other interested persons might bring these individuals to the attention of responsible organizations. Some communities—for example, Windsor—have established an elderly persons social and recreational centre with good results.

It is certain that when a person retires he must prepare for a new way of life and make adjustments in his personal mode of living and in previously established habits. Community, church or other private social and recreational centres, together with suitable counselling, would be of much help in overcoming the hurdles.

Many authorities, today, are convinced that retirement comes too abruptly for many men at the age of 65 years, plus. There is a growing activity on the part of British employers to retire their older workers on a gradual basis. They recognize that flexible retirement methods serve best. There are indications that many industrial organizations on this continent are also giving greater recognition to the problem of maintaining capable older workers in employment for longer periods of time than heretofore.

MINISTER'S ADVISORY COMMITTEES

The Department obtains the benefits of the deliberations of three Ministers' Advisory Committees which operate on a continuing basis. These Committees supplement the views and ideas of the staff members concerned and many worthwhile contributions are made in the development and establishment of programs and policies.

(1) Advisory Council on Public Welfare Training

Many professions and occupations today are short in numbers, among the more prominent being that of social workers. Two Universities—the University of Toronto School of Social Work and the School of Social Welfare of St. Patrick's College, Ottawa—provide graduate social work training in Ontario. The demands for the graduates exceed the supply in a marked degree. Preference in placement is given to those areas of service which require out-of-ordinary skills such as in child welfare work and in relation to certain key services within the Department.

The majority of graduate social workers are, of course, women and, frequently, within approximately two years after graduation (like nurses) they marry. The rate of attrition in social work is very high and causes an abnormal turnover in the staff of organizations that rely upon these graduates.

To encourage the development of a continuing supply of suitable personnel to serve public welfare departments, an Advisory Council on Public Welfare Training was set up under the chairmanship of Professor Charles E. Hendry, Director of the School of Social Work at the University of Toronto. Much progress has resulted from the activities of this Committee and emphasis is being given to the recruitment and training of personnel deemed to be acceptable in the public welfare field.

It is interesting to note that our Department has one of the lowest rates of turnover in staff within the government services, as a whole. But it is evident that the on-going administration of our welfare services will depend upon the consideration given to the adoption of positive measures to assure a continuity of capable civil and civic servants for this most important field of work.

One of the positive and progressive contributions of the Advisory Council has resulted from their sponsorship of a publication entitled "Social Work—A Rewarding Career". This attractive, descriptive booklet was placed in the hands of 5,000 senior Arts Students in Ontario's Universities. In addition to the outline of the kinds of social work positions and opportunities available, some understanding was provided as to the nature and extent of the public welfare services within the Province. The Committee is also serving the Department in reviewing and making recommendations with respect to research and training projects submitted for support by the Federal-provincial grants being made available for these purposes in a wide range of endeavours within the social welfare field.

The Chairman of the Committee—Professor Charles E. Hendry—makes these comments in his Annual Report as Director of the School of Social Work, University of Toronto: "The attack on personnel problems in the welfare field has been . . . vigorous at the provincial level. The Government of Ontario has given the two graduate professional Schools of Social Work within its jurisdiction genuine support and valued encouragement. In some respects this continuing collaboration is unique in North America. Fifteen formal meetings of the Advisory Council on Public Welfare Training have been held during the year."

(2) Rehabilitation Services

The rehabilitation of handicapped persons is a service which has been greatly expanded and is receiving much emphasis. The Minister's Advisory Committee on Rehabilitation is headed by Major Edward Dunlop, Executive Director of the Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society. This Committee is comprised of a group of highly competent advisers who, in their own right, are specialists in the multiple aspects of the field of rehabilitation.

The Department's rehabilitation program is mainly concerned with the location and selection of physically or mentally handicapped persons who may benefit from the rehabilitation process, with the goal of vocational training and placement in employment. The procedures are related to social and medical assessment including, sometimes, specific treatment of the handicapping condition, together with counselling and training to enable these persons to achieve a measure of independence through gainful employment.

We have met with much success in working with hundreds of handicapped persons who have been brought to our attention. The Committee is proving to be most valuable in lending support to the measures being undertaken in the development and expansion of the service. A constant review is being made of techniques and in the methods adopted to reach out to those who might suitably come within the scope of the program. There are naturally some failures in the efforts of the staff to rehabilitate some persons; but the majority of cases achieve the ultimate favourable results. It is apparent that the treatment of these cases is often time-consuming—some needing a greater measure of counselling and other supportive services.

Much skill is required in the rehabilitation of handicapped persons and the development of the program is inevitably due for further expansion. Cases referred to the Branch usually come through municipal offices, hospitals, physicians and private organizations, all who have a special interest in the rehabilitation of handicapped men and women.

(3) Indians

The Indian population of Ontario is receiving concentrated attention through legislation and services. The Minister's Advisory Committee on Indian Affairs, comprised of native Indians and headed by Mr. Elliott Moses of the Six Nations Reserve, has been directing a painstaking and thorough review of all aspects of the social and economic status of Indians and their living conditions—including some of the cultural features that are associated with the Indian way of life in this Province.

The time to time recommendations of this Committee are being adopted by the Department and it is hopeful that their views, as expressed to the Joint Senate-House of Commons Committee on Indian Affairs, will result in implementation. Among other recommendations, the Committee considers that the entire federal Indian Act should be reconsidered and re-written in the light of present day conditions.

It is felt that the Indian Bands, residing in Southern Ontario, in particular, have been making marked progress in the administration of their own local welfare services on their reservations. Some 37 Indian Bands, through their own Councils, now administer the provisions of The General Welfare Assistance Act for the benefit of their members and have established a direct relationship with this Department.

It is true, however, that in the northern regions of the Province, a vigorous step-up in services is indicated. The Indians of the north frequently live under primitive conditions, lacking the means of communication, education, employment and housing, among other accepted amenities of modern day life. The Department is now taking much greater responsibilities in treatment and in rendering essential services to the Indian population of Northern Ontario. The methods which have been sponsored by the Indian Affairs Branch of the federal government will gradually be replaced.

It is recognized that the opportunities of Indians to earn a livelihood—especially in Northern Ontario—are inadequate if these people are to be accepted into the normal stream of life as developed in this Province. In the past, the Indian has largely earned his living through trapping, fishing and other natural pursuits. Positive action must necessarily be directed towards the many-sided features of the Indian way of life. We are striving for immediate constructive results utilizing the resources of the Department. A special Unit which involves the employment of suitable Indian personnel is being organized to undertake the necessary activities and the administration of the required services.

There has been a movement in recent years of Indians to urban areas and our Advisory Committee is reviewing the effects of this transition. The Department is devoting funds to private agencies in Toronto who are giving specialized services in favour of Indians who require counselling and other types of aid.

CONCLUSION

I have devoted much comment this year to the field of research activities within the Department because methods of approach, the circumstances of individuals and the conditions under which programs are developed are always subject to change. It is worthy of note that two of our research projects, namely, the review of Long Term Family Cases and the Special Unit established for men over 50 years of age are being supported by federal funds under the National Welfare Grants program.

Preventive services, in the fullest sense of the term, must take precedence on behalf of families and individuals who are likely prospects for public funds. It is of equal importance that greater emphasis be given to the re-establishment of public assistance recipients through training or retraining, counselling and other measures which may lead to ultimate independence. Concentrated casework services must also be extended by the strategic placement of such specialists throughout the Province as well as by the greater use of the facilities of certain private agencies which operate within Ontario. It may be that a fee-for-service arrangement might be designed to give advanced attention to certain cases who might benefit through such treatment.

A Department which is responsible for and actively engaged in such a large variety of services must be staffed by a personnel complement which provides competent knowledge and understanding. Skilled professions within the Department include persons with training in administration, legislation, social work, medicine, sociology, nursing, nutrition, accounting, gerontology and economics, as well as graduates in psychology and from the Institute of Child Studies. We also rely, to a degree, on private organizations such as the Ontario Welfare Council, the Ontario Welfare Officers Association and the Schools of Social Work, together with the resources of other government departments and private consultants who are engaged periodically in an advisory capacity. These supportive sources are indispensable to the Department in the development of proper administrative policies and procedures.

The work of the Department involves, in large measure, the co-operation of municipalities and municipal welfare officers. A close working relationship is maintained between the staff of the Department and municipal officials who, in many instances, carry heavy public welfare responsibilities. We are most appreciative of the importance of their tasks.

I would like to pay special tribute to Mr. Arthur N. Stone of the Attorney-General's Department who provides outstanding consultative services in the designing of welfare legislation, both Acts and Regulations, in collaboration with our Executive Officer, Gifford C. Price.

In establishing a new Finance and Administration Branch within the Department, under the direction of Miss Dorothea M. Crittenden, we are much indebted to Mr. Harvey A. Cotman, Provincial Auditor, for the assistance he gave towards its development. We more than appreciate Mr. Cotnam's ever-ready help and advice which consistently bring about betterments in the manner in which public funds are administered to individual cases and in the payment of provincial subsidies and grants to municipalities and private organizations.

I am also personally much in debt to the Directors of each of the Branches within the Department, the Regional Welfare Officers and the other senior members of staff who accept their responsibilities in such a capable manner. A special word of appreciation is due, as well, to the office staff and the field workers who so faithfully maintain the essential day to day services.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

James S. Band,
Deputy Minister.

CHILD WELFARE BRANCH

The summarizing sentence in the report of this Branch for the fiscal year 1960 reads: "Finally, as the goals set ten years ago are attained or with the changing times become inappropriate, requests continue to arise for a study which will examine basic rights and responsibilities as between parent and state and such questions as the integration and co-ordination in welfare administration, all with a view to more appropriate and efficient child welfare services." Accordingly, the Minister, on the 4th day of May, 1961, appointed a committee of welfare and other specialists under the chairmanship of Charles J. Foster, Esquire, to conduct such a study. Members of this committee are representative of academic, professional and administrative levels reflecting both the tax-supported and voluntary points of view. This study is under way.

As matters stand, the primary responsibility for the care of children rests with the family. We have, however, collectively set limits or standards of acceptable care. When families flounder or break down it becomes the concern of all. It is only then that the institutions, volunteer and tax-supported, become involved. To do more would be an infringement; to do less, a denial of our social principles.

The function of the Branch is, through advice, supervision, inspection and the administration of grants, to assure continued improvement in the efficiency of the 55 children's aid societies, the 40 institutions serving children, young adults and unmarried mothers and a variety of homes registered or seeking registration under The Children's Boarding Homes Act.

An important reflection of the success of the program is the extent to which societies and institutions are quantitatively and qualitatively able to provide a service which enables children to remain in their own homes, rehabilitates the homes from which it is necessary to bring them into care so that they may be returned to their parents as quickly as possible, and, failing this, ensures that the needs of the children are met through placement in adoption or in other suitable substitute homes.

An index of the effect of this program has been the proportion of the child population served in public care. We can report, as we have been able to report annually since 1948, that this proportion is less than the year before. It would appear, however, that this trend is coming to a close. Concurrently, as the proportion of the child population in the care of the agencies decreased, the staffs required to serve them increased until the proportion of children served had dropped to less than half and the staff to serve them had increased to more than double their 1948 levels.

If the justification for the increase in staff has been the resulting decrease in the proportion of children in public care, further such increases must now be very carefully considered since the increases in staff per child for the past several years have not been accompanied by as marked a reduction in the proportion of the child population in care. For the year just past, though the staff per child increased, the proportion of children in care did not decrease. It is, of course, realized that this general condition does not apply in every individual agency and that caseloads in many of them are still too high.

The children in public care today have, however, become a core which presents such difficulty that in many societies the increase in quantity without increase in quality of service is of little effect and it would, therefore, in general, appear that, where reductions in caseloads to approximately fifty cases per worker have been achieved, further decreases should only be considered where the individual worker has demonstrated sufficient skill to make effective use of the increased time which becomes available with caseload reductions.

The corollary must then be that, if the function of this Branch is to advise, supervise and inspect with improvements in service as its goal, the focus for the immediate future must be to a greater extent than ever before specifically the quality of the service. Towards this end then, although shortages of supervisory staff and the absence of the Director for some months reduced frequency of visits to the societies, active participation was continued in efforts to train and recruit more competent staff for the agencies served. Accordingly, the activities of the Branch staff has, both in and out of office hours, included organizing, lecturing and administering in respect of courses for workers, supervisors, and administrators not only in association with the Department itself, but with the Association of Children's Aid Societies, the Association of Children's Institutions, the Toronto School of Social Work and Osgoode Hall Law School.

To summarize then, statistical evidence would appear to confirm that, although the provincial average caseload per worker continues to decrease, it has not been possible to maintain a proportionate increase in the effective use of the additional time made available for those more skilled and intensive services which are demanded as the core of difficult cases hard-

ens. Any further increase in the number and the inevitable cost of personnel should not now occur in the absence of a demonstrated capacity to provide effective service.

The implication for the Branch is clear. It must be so directed as to place greater emphasis on such factors as will assure effective results with these increasingly difficult cases.

DAY NURSERIES BRANCH

During the fifteenth year of the program for licensing day nurseries, nursery schools and private kindergartens, 328 licences were granted, the highest number since the beginning of the program. Only twelve remained unlicensed at the end of the year, eight of which were recent applications. Thus, only four nurseries were unlicensed due to poor standards. It is apparent that the necessity for standards is being generally accepted. In fact, many nurseries are voluntarily meeting a standard much higher than the minimum requirements of the day nursery regulations.

A review of the 32 nurseries which closed during the year further points out the general acceptance of standards. Only seven of these nurseries had been granted a licence. Twenty-five withdrew their applications for various reasons, an important one being the inability to meet the standards for a licence.

Only five percent of the nurseries now open have been licensed since the beginning of the program. One quarter of the nurseries have been licensed at least ten years, and half of the nurseries have been licensed five years or more. Sixteen percent received their first licence during the present year.

There are thirty nurseries sponsored by municipalities for provincial-municipal grants on a fifty-fifty basis. Half of these nurseries care for the children of working mothers, and the rest offer a half-day program to encourage the full development of the pre-school child.

The Nursery Education Association of Ontario is playing an increasingly important part in stimulating interest in nurseries and raising standards for staffing them. Its eleven branches keep it in close touch with over 75 percent of the nurseries in the province. The Association operates a "Pre-School Parent Centre", located in Toronto, but available to the whole province. This centre is demonstrating the assistance that nursery educators can give to parents of young children by counselling them both individually and in groups. It also offers an advisory service to groups of mothers wishing to start a nursery program. It assists established nurseries to raise their standards. It also advises nursery directors on the guidance of handicapped children who are attending nurseries along with normal children. Recently it has enlarged its activities to provide consultant service to other institutions caring for young children such as children's hospitals.

and Children's Aid Societies. The work of this Centre is financed by a grant from this Department and from private donations, but the present extent of its work is made possible by the volunteer efforts of members of the Association.

The Ottawa branch of the Nursery Education Association of Ontario has carried out an interesting demonstration of practical help and guidance to mothers of young children. Once a week for ten weeks these mothers bring their children to a nursery setting where the children play under supervision. The mothers have lectures, discussion group and observation periods to increase their understanding of children and of family living. This program is most effective in giving the mothers greater confidence in themselves. This branch has also pioneered in the development of evening courses to train nursery teachers. The course requires four winters to complete, but is so arranged that candidates may enrol each year to follow the four year cycle. In this way the Ottawa nurseries are assured of a continuous supply of more highly competent staff. This course is an interesting alternative to the day time courses offered by the Extension Departments of McMaster and Toronto. The Institute of Child Study continues to give a one-year graduate course and Ryerson Institute a two-year course in pre-school education.

In November, 1961, the Branch moved to larger quarters. Many persons come to the office for advice on organizing and equipping nurseries, and for help in securing trained staff, and we are pleased to be able to serve them better from our new office.

It is of interest to report that the provinces of Alberta and Manitoba are now regulating nurseries to some extent. Previously only British Columbia and Ontario offered this service.

This branch continues to work closely with municipal officials in supervising the nurseries. The excellent co-operation of the local officials greatly increases the effectiveness of the licensing program for the protection of the 11,000 young children enrolled in nurseries throughout Ontario.

FIELD SERVICES BRANCH

Services provided by Field Services Branch continued to increase during 1961-1962 and at an accelerated rate compared to the previous year. At the beginning of the new fiscal year the total number of active and pending cases had increased by 3.6%, or almost double the increase in 1960-1961. Disabled Persons' Allowances were up 7%; Mothers' and Dependent Children's Allowances, 2.4%; and Old Age Assistance 2.6%. The total caseload increased in all but two of the seventeen regions.

Among the more notable features of the expanding work load was that of requests for new applications in the welfare allowances programs. During the last two months of the fiscal year the number of such requests were about four times higher than the average number of requests monthly over the previous two-year period. The primary reasons for this increase appear to be the higher annual income ceilings and increased allowances which became effective on February 1st, 1962, making more people eligible to receive Old Age Assistance, Blind or Disabled Persons' Allowances.

The total active caseload of field workers increased from 52,024 on March 31st, 1961, to 53,910 on March 31st, 1962. The comparative figures for each of the four major welfare allowances programs were as follows:—

	March 31st 1962	March 31st 1961
Old Age Assistance	25,520	24,880
Blind Persons' Allowances	1,956	1,964
Disabled Persons' Allowances	15,342	14,345
Mothers' Allowances	11,092	10,835
	<hr/>	<hr/>

The Special Investigating Unit referred to in last year's report was established in June, 1961, and has achieved favourable results to date. The major work of the Unit has been in relation to deserted families but it also investigates other cases where there are extraordinary problems. Studies of the results indicate savings in the expenditure of General Welfare Assistance and Mothers' Allowance funds amounting to more than $125,000 annually. These estimated savings result from suspensions or reductions of assistance or allowance payments for the following reasons:-

- (a) Husbands and wives being reconciled;
- (b) Aid obtained by fraudulent means;
- (c) Partial maintenance being obtained from husbands by court order; or
- (d) Fathers being helped to find full-time employment.

The Field Staff made 240,814 calls during the year serving the general public and other Branches of the Department. Of this number, 205,925 were related to the four major Welfare Allowances programs and 34,889 concerned General Welfare Assistance, Rehabilitation, Child and Family Welfare, and miscellaneous services. The total number of calls increased from 236,074 last year. The average monthly caseload per worker decreased from 406 to 404.

The average annual cost per call or visit, exclusive of salaries, decreased to 78¢, a reduction of 4¢. This represents a decrease of 22¢ per call since the fiscal year 1956-1957. Among the reasons for the decrease are consolidation and simplification of forms and other paper work, greater density of caseloads (particularly in urban areas), a more adequate number of staff, more competent staff due to higher qualifications and the in-service training received under the training program conducted by the Department, and improved supervision and control of field work.

In carrying out the duties of the Field Services Branch it is necessary for the staff to work closely with municipal and private welfare officials throughout Ontario. The co-operation of these officials in all phases of the work is gratefully acknowledged.

GENERAL WELFARE ASSISTANCE BRANCH

During the fiscal year 1961/62 assistance under the General Welfare Assistance Act and regulations was administered by the Municipal Officials and in unorganized areas by the Provincial Welfare Administrators.

Municipalities were responsible for 20% of payment of assistance issued for General Welfare Assistance. The Province reimbursed the Municipalities at 80%. The Federal Government contributed 50% of the expenditures. In unorganized areas the cost of assistance was shared by the two Senior Governments on a 50/50 basis. The Federal Government does not participate in expenditures for medical services, dental extractions or prosthetic appliances under this programme.

Following very careful studies and review the regulations were amended to include schedules for pre-added budget for food, clothing and household sundries.

Effective June 1st, 1961, Shelter Allowance in Metropolitan Toronto and in Municipalities having a population of 100,000 or over were changed by increasing substantially the amount on which the Province will pay subsidy. This enabled the families on aid to be more suitably accommodated in dwellings of a higher standard. The above has proved beneficial to all concerned.

MEDICAL

Persons in receipt of General Welfare Assistance continue to be covered for medical services from the doctor of their choice in the home or in the doctor's office.

DENTAL

The cost of emergency extractions on recommendation of the Municipal Welfare Administrator and assessment by the Director of Dental Services was shared—20% Municipal and 80% by the Province. In unorganized areas payment is met by the Province.

ACCOUNTS

In the fiscal year under review there were 940 organized Municipalities in the Province and of these 865 or 92.0% submitted accounts.

Included in the above were 30 cities and all submitted accounts. There were 316 towns and villages in the Province and of these 280 or 88.6% submitted accounts, and of 594 townships 555 or 93.4% submitted accounts. In the previous year 839 Municipalities rendered accounts.

EXPENDITURES

The gross expenditure for the fiscal year ending March 31st, 1962, was $31,950,267.00; the Provincial share being $10,907,443.00, the Federal Government contributing $14,602,672.00, and the Municipalities $6,440,152.00. The gross increase over the previous year was $8,200,006.00 or 34.5%.

SUPPLEMENTARY AID

Assistance under this category was paid to persons in receipt of a Governmental benefit such as Blind Persons Allowances, Disabled Persons Allowances, Mothers' Allowances, Old Age Assistance or Old Age Security.

Such assistance was granted mainly where there were high shelter costs or costly drugs.

The maximum amount payable was $20.00 per month per person shareable on an 80/20 basis.

NUMBER OF PERSONS ON AID

In the month of March 1962 there were 106,345 persons receiving assistance whereas in March 1961 there were 93,764 showing an increase of 12,581 persons.

PROSTHETIC APPLIANCES

Various types of appliances such as artificial legs, arms, braces and orthopaedic shoes were supplied to persons requiring this type of assistance. Also Rehabilitation Courses were provided where necessary. This programme may enable persons to be released from hospital and others to accept gainful employment. The results have proved most beneficial.

DESERTION

Constant attention has been given on a Provincial and Municipal level, especially under the Special Investigation Unit, to the problem of desertions. Every effort was made to apprehend the absconding person (with the assistance of the Municipal and Provincial Authorities).

Reconciliations have been effected and where necessary Court Action has been taken. This procedure has resulted in reducing the number of persons receiving assistance. The number of persons in the desertion category during March 1962 was 2333 whereas in March 1961 there were 2215. This rate of increase is less than the general percentage for the year.

TRANSPORTATION

In conjunction with the Municipalities transportation costs were paid on an 80/20 basis for a person or family being returned to place of residence outside of Ontario. The costs of returning heads of families were shared on the same basis. Also the costs of returning the absconding husband to appear before a judicial body have been paid in conjunction with the Municipalities.

INTER-PROVINCIAL

A considerable number of persons were repatriated to the province of residence during the past year following agreement by the other Province.

NURSING HOME CARE

Assistance under this type of aid is shared by the Province with the Municipality on an 80/20 basis up to $100.00 per month. The programme continues to expand, there being an increase of 14.2% in the number of persons assisted during the year under review compared to the previous year. The net result enables a person to be released from hospital and receive adequate care with supervision.

The officials of the Municipalities with Medical Officers of Health and Fire Department Officers enable the standards of the Nursing Homes in Ontario to be advanced to a higher level. The Nursing Homes are visited by a representative from this branch who submits detailed reports and makes recommendations where applicable.

IMMIGRANTS

Assistance was issued to immigrants in the same manner as to other citizens.

The Province and the Federal Governments assume the costs on an equal basis up to twelve consecutive months residence in a Municipality, following which the person or family are considered as residents for welfare purposes.

INDIANS

Assistance to Indians is granted in similar manner as to other citizens.

There are 37 Indian Bands administering assistance as Municipalities. General Welfare Assistance Regulations are in effect with, the Band paying 20% and the Province 80%, the Federal share being 50%.

ECONOMIC REPORT

Quarterly reports were received from the Regional Administrators which outlined the economic trend in various large Municipalities.

GENERAL

General Welfare Assistance was granted during the past year to persons in necessitous circumstances and the branch has endeavoured to assist all needy and worthy cases including advice in their problems and endeavouring to obtain for them suitable employment where possible.

This Branch continues to receive numerous requests from Municipalities, other Provinces, Welfare Agencies and various Departments of the Government for guidance and clearance in matters pertaining to welfare in general. These enquiries all received immediate attention.

All referrals to our Regional Welfare Administrators also received prompt attention.

Sincere appreciation is extended to all Municipal Officials for their co-operation during the past year. Their assistance has made it possible for the issuing of assistance and counselling to various persons in necessitous circumstances or experiencing difficulties.

HOMEMAKERS' AND NURSES' SERVICES

The fiscal year ending March 31st, 1962, marks the fourth year of the Homemakers' and Nurses' Services programme. This programme continues to expand. There was an increase of 15.1% in expenditure over the previous year, with 18,463 days and 24,950 hours of Homemaker Service provided in the home. The latter total represents service by the hours as opposed to an eight hour day. Registered Nurses made 105,818 visits in the home at the request of the attending physician.

The basic purpose of the programme is preservation of the home and family during illness and other emergencies. The use of a homemaker or Registered Nurse may eliminate or shorten periods of hospital care.

Many elderly or handicapped persons may need a measure of assistance for a temporary period of an hour or so daily, with such duties as preparation of a meal, the tidying up of the house, and occasional shopping services, in order that they may remain in their own homes. Likewise, a visit by a Registered Nurse to administer a medication or treatment under the direction of the attending physician, may prevent the elderly person being admitted to a Hospital, Licensed Nursing Home or Home for the Aged.

Municipalities are purchasing wherever possible, the services of a Homemaker or a Registered Nurse from Private Agencies such as Visiting Homemaker Associations, The Red Cross Society and the Victorian Order of Nurses.

The Province will share with a Municipality 50% of the cost in an amount up to $8.00 for an 8 hour day or $1.00 per hour for a homemaker and $2.50 for each visit by a Registered Nurse.

Persons who need assistance under this programme may apply directly to the Municipal Welfare Officer or any of the Department's seventeen Regional Offices.

HOMES FOR THE AGED BRANCH

Again, we are able to report further progress on care for the aged under the three Acts.

Bed and Semi-bed care within the Homes for the Aged and Charitable Institutions Acts is on the increase.

In municipally operated Homes, Bed and Semi-bed care as of December 31st, 1960 was 35.1% of total. On December 31st, 1961, this has increased by 1.2% to 36.3% and this trend continues.

The services necessary within the Homes have now been well established and the only changes contemplated would be improvements to existing services.

With the continued co-operation of the Provincial Government, Municipalities and Charitable Organizations, a concentrated programme of improved operation is planned for the immediate future. The progress of the past year is detailed as follows:

MUNICIPALLY OPERATED HOMES FOR THE AGED

The number of beds in municipally operated Homes for the Aged has increased by 865 or 10.5% over the previous year. This is outlined in the table titled, "Total beds including temporary beds". This is the second largest increase in any one year since the Homes for the Aged Act has been in effect. The total bed accommodation has more than tripled since 1948.

Seven new Homes have been completed in the past year, of which two are additional to the growing list and five are replacing the old type home.

Additions and/or extensions to existing homes added 535 beds.

The congregate care type homes have now been reduced from 35 in 1948 to 12 in 1961. The largest reduction in any one year came about in 1961. At the same time, the largest number of new segregate care homes, 9, have been opened in the past year, two of these were completely new homes, the other seven resulted from additions or extensions to existing homes.

CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS

Charitable organizations continue to extend and expand in their construction programme of housing for the older citizens.

Some of the new Institutions are unique in the North American Continent in their ever-growing building projects. The assistance from the Province of Ontario in the construction and operational costs has served tremendously in providing the necessary stimulant to encourage organizations in their charitable work.

Three complete new homes were constructed in the past year and three additions were made to existing homes. The three new homes added 384 beds to the ever-growing list, with the new extensions to existing homes adding 236 beds.

Bed and semi-bed care in Charitable Institutions is also on the increase. In the past year more and more charitable organizations realized that there is a growing need in this area and we anticipate substantial increases in accommodation in the immediate future.

ELDERLY PERSONS HOUSING

This particular field of housing accommodation seems to have become unusually active in the past year. Six different municipalities have built and officially opened 108 units for both married couples and single persons and it is interesting to note that nine different municipalities have 978 units under construction. Enquiries and applications for aid would indicate that these figures will materially increase in the near future.

WELFARE ALLOWANCES BRANCH

The agreements under which the Government of Canada shares with the Province in the expenditures for old age assistance, blind persons' allowances and disabled persons' allowances were amended to provide for an increase in the maximum assistance or allowance from $55 to $65 a month, effective February 1, 1962. Corresponding increases were made in the maximum permissible annual income. Accordingly, cheques to recipients were increased by $10 a month commencing with the payments for February 1962.

During the year ended March 31, 1962, expenditures for old age assistance, blind persons' allowances, disabled persons' allowances, mothers' allowances, rehabilitation services and medical and dental services exceeded $40 million. As shown in the following table, Ontario provided approximately 69% of the funds for these programs.

Source of Funds	Allowances and Rehabilitation Services	Medical and Dental Services	Total Expenditures	Percent
Ontario	$25,510,226	$2,196,431	$27,706,657	68.7
Government of Canada	12,456,401	—	12,456,401	30.9
Other Provinces	158,578	—	158,578	.4
	<hr/> $38,125,205	<hr/> $2,196,431	<hr/> $40,321,636	<hr/> 100

Recipients of allowances who were eligible for care under the Department's Medical Welfare Plan were also insured under the Ontario hospital plan. Premiums for Hospital Care Insurance (standard ward accommodation) were paid by the Province.

OLD AGE ASSISTANCE

During the fiscal year, an average of 22,785 recipients a month received payments totalling $13,926,888 of which Ontario's share was $6,912,431. At March 31, 1962 there were 22,868 recipients, an increase of 0.6% over the number of March 31, 1961 and amounted to 12.7% of the (census) population in the 65-69 year age group.

Applications were received from 7,988 persons, an increase of 9.7% over the number received in the previous year. Of 7,854 applications reviewed during the year, 86.8% were approved and assistance granted.

BLIND PERSONS' ALLOWANCES

Allowances totalling $1,121,769 were paid during the year to an average of 1,827 blind persons a month. Ontario's share of the expenditure was $278,116. There were 1,846 recipients at the fiscal year end, compared with 1,845 at March 31, 1961.

Applications were received from 278 persons, an increase of 4.1% over the number received in the previous year. Of 298 applications reviewed during the year, 66.8% were approved, 30.2% were ineligible, and of these 65.6% were ruled ineligible under the medical test of blindness.

DISABLED PERSONS' ALLOWANCES

Allowances amounting to $9,038,129 for the year were paid to a monthly average of 13,584 disabled persons. Ontario's share of the expenditure was $4,475,269. The caseload continued to increase and at March 31, 1962 reached 13,762 recipients, an increase of 3.4% over the number at March 31, 1961.

Applications for an allowance were received from 4,347 persons. This was an increase of 4.8% over the number received during the previous year. Of 4,663 applications reviewed during the year, 46.6% were approved for payment and an almost identical number (46.5%) were ineligible largely on medical grounds.

MOTHERS' ALLOWANCES

Expenditures for allowances during the fiscal year amounted to $13,650,401. A monthly average of 10,217 families received the allowance on behalf of an average of 35,954 beneficiaries. The number of cases increased to 10,359 at March 31, 1962, an increase of 2.1% over the previous year end. New applications declined by 5.1% from 3,289 during 1960-61 to 3,121 for the year ended March 31, 1962.

Allowances to mothers and dependent fathers continued to be provided on a budgetary basis with payments ranging from a maximum of $120 a month for a family of 2 persons, to $180 a month for a family consisting of seven or more beneficiaries. Allowances to foster mothers continued on a flat rate basis and are $30 a month for one foster child, $55 for two and $15 for each additional foster child.

REHABILITATION SERVICES BRANCH

The Rehabilitation Services Branch is responsible for administering the vocational rehabilitation program under the federal-provincial Vocational Rehabilitation of Disabled Persons Agreement. The service is designed to restore or improve the working ability of handicapped persons so as to enable them to become satisfactorily employed or self-supporting. Rehabilitation counsellors of the Branch assist the handicapped to determine the kind of work they can best do, to develop through vocational training the ability to do this work and to locate the job that matches this ability.

During the past year, over 1,200 disabled persons sought the assistance of the Branch. All received assessment and counselling services to determine the nature and degree of their handicap and to plan for possible careers. Four hundred and forty-four were provided with courses of training to fit them for employment while 103 were placed in employment without training. Another 238 were placed following training. As in previous years, a substantial number of persons referred for assistance were found to be so seriously disabled as to preclude any possibility of employment placement.

A comparison of this year's statistical tables with those of last year reveals a continual increase in the number of persons with mental illness who are referred for service. While the distribution of almost all other categories of disability have remained the same, the mentally ill have increased from approximately 28 to 38% of the total.

The past year has seen an encouraging growth in rehabilitation facilities. Toward the end of the year, the new Ontario Crippled Children's Centre was opened by the Ontario Society for Crippled Children. This large rehabilitation centre combines under one roof a wide range of modern facilities and qualified specialists to give diagnostic and treatment services to severely physically disabled children on an in-patient and out-patient basis. Both medical and social rehabilitation are encompassed and integrated in an approach to the whole person; the objective of the Centre is described as "total rehabilitation".

Under the leadership of the Ontario Association for Retarded Children, a number of local associations opened new workshops for the retarded, while the Rehabilitation Foundation for the Disabled opened workshops in Timmins and Sault Ste. Marie. At the same time, the Rehabilitation Services Branch placed full-time counsellors in Regional Welfare Offices in Fort William, Ottawa, London and Hamilton.

Finally, with the passing of the Vocational Rehabilitation of Disabled Persons Act, the Federal Government gave statutory authority to the federal-provincial rehabilitation program and financial support to the provinces in providing a comprehensive range of services. Specifically these services include:

Assessment to decide whether the individual can benefit from vocational rehabilitation services. This includes medical assessment to learn the nature and degree of disability and to help determine eligibility for services, the need for additional medical services and the individual's work capacities. It includes social assessment to determine with the individual his personal and other resources and how these may contribute to his progress and plans. Vocational assessment is provided to evaluate the person's potentialities in relation to various available occupations.

Counselling, through which the individual is helped to appraise himself and his situation, choose suitable occupational goals and achieve them.

Remedial or restorative treatment to remove or reduce the disability. This may be medical or surgical treatment, physiotherapy, occupational therapy, or the provision of prosthetic appliances.

Maintenance and transportation costs during treatment, training or any other phase of the actual rehabilitation process.

Tools, equipment and licenses if these are necessary to enable the rehabilitated individual obtain a job.

Employment placement in all areas of the competitive labour market, in a profession, self-employment, home making, farm-work, home industries, sheltered employment or other remunerative work.

Ontario was the first province to approve the new Agreement under this Act, thus paving the way for providing new and fuller services to the handicapped of the province.

THE SOLDIERS' AID COMMISSION AND THE ONTARIO CANTEEN FUND

In making this my eleventh annual report I consider it advisable to include in a single report the operation of The Soldiers' Aid Commission and The Ontario Canteen Fund.

In 1925 the Government of Canada passed the C.E.F. Canteen Funds Act, the purpose being to distribute to the Provinces on a basis of enlistment in the C.E.F. approximately $2,350,000.00 profits from the operation of canteens during World War I. Ontario's share was 41.237% or a total of $1,031,381.05. While the money was distributed by a Federal Act, the trustees are appointed by the Government of the province concerned.

In 1950 the Government of Ontario combined the administration of The Soldiers' Aid Commission and The Ontario Canteen Fund by appointing the trustees Commissioners under The Soldiers' Aid Act. Each Act, Federal and Provincial, specifically states that the Trustees and Commissioners shall serve without remuneration. Consolidation of the administration of the two funds has eliminated any possibility of overlapping.

A comparison of the grants made in the fiscal year 1951-1952 and those grants made in the fiscal year 1961-1962 indicates the value of the marriage:—

	Soldiers' Aid Commission	Ontario Canteen Fund
1951-1952	$17,027.60	$29,925.75
1961-1962	$17,219.81	$49,459.90

The bulk of the funds available to the Soldiers' Aid Commission are monies left by the will of the late Kathleen Hammond with the proviso that the money be used for assistance to "war widows left widows by the war and need help". The funds available to the Trustees are greater than the unmarked funds available to the Commission; with one administration it is possible for the Commission to conserve its funds by using Canteen money when the applicant qualifies as a veteran of the first World War. Since 1928 the Canteen Fund has provided direct assistance to an amount of $1,503,988.50 and at March 31st, 1962, the Fund stands at $276,881.73.

The comparison of grants between 1952 and 1962 indicates that there is without doubt a continuing need for this type of service to ex-servicemen and women and their dependents. It should be here stressed that except in real emergency assistance is not granted if aid is available from Government sources at any level.

The service provided by the Commission and Canteen Fund does not stop at the making of a grant; if other assistance is available, applicants are directed to the proper source, in most instances appointments being made by the small permanent staff.

By close co-operation with World War II funds, such as Naval, Army and Air Force Benevolent Funds, overlapping is kept to a minimum and when occasion warrants responsibility for assistance is jointly assumed.

During the year under consideration, a total of 1,506 grants were made and a breakdown appears as appendix to this report. It is worthy of note that there is an increasing need for assistance for house repairs; it may be concluded that the First War veteran, whose average age is now 70, is prevented from making the minor repairs to his home that he was in the habit of looking after in his younger days.

I record appreciation of the very great assistance that the staff of the Department of Veterans Affairs and the staff of the Ontario Department of Welfare render in securing accurate reports when applicants for assistance have not clearly stated the circumstances.

Appreciation is expressed to the Medical and Dental professions for the consideration given by their members in settling accounts, and to the suppliers of furnishings, clothing and prosthetic appliances and to the Finance Companies. In fact it has been our experience that all with whom we come in contact are ready and willing to assist us in the relief of problems incurred by a veteran or his family.

During the year the Commission received a bequest in the amount of $500.00 from the estates of the late Edith Johnston.

I would be remiss if I did not record the appreciation of the Commissioners and Trustees for the loyal and understanding service rendered by the staff—Eric Seaman, R. G. Buchanan, and Mary Macaulay, without whom our task would be impossible.

Respectfully submitted,

T. M. Medland,
Chairman.

CHILD WELFARE BRANCH

Throughout the year the service of the Child Welfare Branch to the 55 children's aid societies, the 42 institutions and the varying numbers of children's boarding homes was maintained at a somewhat higher level than was possible in the immediately preceding few years and once again its most heartening aspect was the continuing improvement in the adoption program. However, a constant problem of major concern increased in prominence and is the focus of this report.

With the improvement since the war in the general economy, provincial social services and the services of the children's aid societies themselves, there has, since the early fifties, been a continuing decrease in the proportion of the child population served by the societies in their own homes. The problem content of the cases served, however, has presented an ever-hardening core of which statistical evidence is apparent in an 80% increase over the past eight years in the proportion of re-opened cases.

With post-war changes there have been marked indications of a reduction in the family focus of society generally. Items of related evidence would appear to be that the school, the church, the community centre and the street corner have been replacing more and more the demands of the family on the interests of the child and that from a pre-war figure of 10%, there has been an increase in the employment of mothers outside the home to one well over 30%. With this dispersion in family focus where a reducing proportion of mothers have the time or inclination to raise their own children, the increasing failure to recruit foster parents who are willing to devote their talents to the children of others is of major concern.

An adequate supply of foster homes from which to select those capable of meeting the needs of particular children has long been essential to a successful child placement program. With the reduction in the proportion of the child population served in their own homes, there has been a parallel reduction in the children taken into public care which has reduced the numerical pressures on foster home resources. The problems of the children taken into care are, however, extremely complex and impose upon the diminishing foster home supply the pressure of an increasing proportion of children whose needs can only be met by the most competent foster parents.

Only with the support of able social workers have the majority of foster parents attained in the past their maximum efficiency and kept pace with the application of new knowledge in the care of children. However, as the difficulties tightened, so the knowledge, intelligence, training and skill required to solve them also increased. Unfortunately, the long, expensive training required by social workers does not command salaries comparable to those paid in many fields which make fewer demands and require less costly preparation. The result has been that the numbers and skills of available social workers have not met the demand. Evidence of this multi-factor problem, which incidentally is prevalent throughout North America, reflects an entrenched position in Ontario.

In a recent systematic examination of the cases of children ostensibly in the temporary care of children's aid societies, clear evidence emerged that, due to the complexity of the problems, the inadequate skill of some social workers and the insufficient supply of foster homes, many children who were placed in homes which, although adequate to the needs of certain children, were not able to meet those of the children placed with them. Many children were, in consequence, returned in desperation by disillusioned foster parents to the societies who, often in desperation themselves, replaced the children in what was intended to be emergency placements, which in turn led to a succession of replacements and set the children on a course of inevitable personality destruction. For the majority of these children there will be no recovery. As "orphans of the living" their permanent way of life has become "temporary care".

If a similar disaster for hundreds of children now in public care in Ontario is to be avoided, rigid economy of resources would appear to be necessary. It has been the experience that available foster homes should be reserved for the children they can most effectively help and not lost to the service of such children through the disillusionment resulting from the placement of "bad" children. For many children for whom foster families were not the answer, small group homes met their needs, and for those with more serious physical and mental handicaps, homes staffed by persons with special and often more expensive skills had some application.

Complicated and comprehensive as any reorganization of resources may have been, essential to its most efficient use has been the provision of some form of assessment facility staffed by those of maximum skill available to assure that each child be placed in the type of home most likely to meet his needs and one which would not be lost to the service of others in the event that it was not able to meet the needs of a particular child. Where life in a normal family setting has been essential to the needs of a child, it has often been necessary to pay a rate which could compete with those paid for comparable responsibility.

Where such approaches have been effectively manned, in-service training and full-time technical courses graded to the complexity of services required and available to those who have the interest and capacity have been used. Where the interests of both the child and the taxpayer have, however, been best served, the highest concentration of services available has been focussed on the needs of the children before their removal from their own homes became necessary, for the only true solution to child placement is, of course, the elimination of its causes.

The need for widespread application in Ontario of effective remedies would, in the light of accelerating technological change and possible sociological dislocation, appear to be rapidly approaching. So pronounced, however, could be approaching dislocations, that the successful introduction of remedies at this stage might well require closer co-ordination of public and private, child and family services and closer structural and financial ties with the various levels of government.

DAY NURSERIES BRANCH

During this year 366 nurseries were under the supervision of the Branch. At the end of the year 324 nurseries were operating with licences, 30 had closed, and 12 others had applied too recently for the licensing process to have been completed. This was the first year that no nurseries were operating below the required standard.

The welfare aspects of nurseries are becoming increasingly important. With the emphasis on using welfare subsidies to strengthen families rather than to permit chronic dependency, it is readily seen that it is preferable that the subsidy be in a form which permits the family to earn its own way. In the urban centres about two-thirds of the mothers using public day nurseries are the sole support of their families. They are adopting a self-supporting way of life aside from aid in the care of their children during their working hours. As soon as the children are old enough not to require substitute care in the mothers' absence, the families become totally self-supporting. The day nursery program may thus be regarded as preventing long-term dependency on public assistance.

Many of the half-day nursery programs are also serving a welfare function. A good example is the Regent Park Co-operative Nursery School. One hundred pre-school children are served in this double session nursery. The mothers participate actively by raising funds for equipment and by assisting in the nursery in rotation. In this way they gain a broader understanding of child development, and the children benefit by a consistent routine both at the nursery and in the home.

Churches and settlement houses are conducting nurseries which alleviate conditions of poverty and over-crowding in the downtown areas of large cities. The mothers of these families are helped to gain new skills in homemaking and child rearing, and are encouraged to feel that their children can overcome the handicaps imposed by the often cheerless environment in which they live.

More educational institutions are becoming interested in offering training to persons eager to work with young children. The University of Toronto, in addition to its well established one year graduate course, is now offering through its Extension Department a professional course divided into three parts. Thus the course can be conveniently taken by young mothers and mature women as well as girls just leaving high school. As much of the work in nurseries is half-time it is a very suitable field for the large number of housewives and mothers who wish to work outside their homes without sacrificing the well-being of their families.

McMaster University and Ontario College of Agriculture have also offered this extension type of nursery training.

Ryerson Institute of Technology continues to give a thorough two-year course in pre-school education.

An interesting variation in training is conducted in Ottawa, where nursery teachers become thoroughly qualified through a series of evening courses lasting for four years. The course is so arranged that a person may enrol each fall and continue until the cycle has been completed. Now that a training program is well underway, there has been a marked improvement in the standards of the Ottawa nurseries.

The Nursery Education Association of Ontario is also concerned with the problem of making the best possible use of young women who come to Ontario with training in nursery work from other parts of Canada, U.S.A., the Commonwealth and European countries. Every effort is made to help them to adjust to conditions here and to find employment in our nurseries.

The Ottawa Nursery Association has continued its program for educating young mothers in the needs of children. A weekly nursery session is arranged for the children while the mothers take part in lectures, discussions and supervised observation of the children. This plan has been so successful that it has been necessary to open an additional centre, and to repeat the course several times each winter.

The Toronto Nursery Association has continued to offer free advice to the parents of young children in the best ways of meeting the normal problems which arise from time to time in nearly every home. This demand is becoming so great that it is beyond the resources of a small voluntary organization and ways are being sought to put this service in the hands of a group whose primary concern it will be.

Both these associations have been much heartened to receive a grant from the Provincial Welfare Department towards these important projects.

The Nursery Education Associations throughout Ontario held its annual meeting this year jointly with the associations of eight mid-western American states. The meeting was in Detroit and Ontario nursery supervisors were pleased to visit a number of American nurseries and to discover that our legislation and standards in nurseries compare favourably with the situation in neighbouring states. It is planned to bring the representatives of these American Nursery Associations to Ontario in the near future to show them Ontario nurseries and standards.

The task of inspecting and giving help to the ever increasing nurseries in Ontario is becoming greater each year. The assistance of regional welfare officer, municipal health, fire and zoning officials, and above all the co-operation of the nursery staff numbering over one thousand has made it possible to safeguard the welfare of the 11,000 children attending these nurseries.

FIELD SERVICES BRANCH

In the course of the fiscal year 1962-1963 the number of cases receiving services from the Field Services Branch increased 2.9 per cent over 1961-1962. All regions except one experienced an increase, the greatest being 7.0 per cent in the region comprised of the Districts of Cochrane and Temiskaming. The number of Disabled Persons' Allowances cases was up 5.3 per cent; Old Age Assistance, 2.7 per cent; Blind Persons' Allowances, 1.2 per cent; and Mothers' Allowances, .4 per cent.

Numerically, the total caseload for all field workers rose from 53,910 on March 31st, 1962 to 55,478 on March 31st, 1963. The comparative figures for each of the four welfare allowances programmes were as follows:

	March 31st 1963	March 31st 1962
Old Age Assistance	26,201	25,520
Blind Persons' Allowances	1,979	1,956
Disabled Persons' Allowances	16,162	15,342
Mothers' Allowances	11,136	11,092
Total	55,478	53,910

It is noted that the Disabled Persons' Allowances caseload continues to expand at the highest rate while the rate of increase in the Mothers' Allowances program shows a marked drop from the previous year. The growth of the Old Age Assistance caseload remains constant, and the total number of Blind cases is not large enough for the increase to be significant.

During the year the Field Staff made 246,679 calls in relation to their varied responsibilities, an increase of 5,865 over the previous year. Of the total 212,359 were visits pertaining to the four welfare allowances programmes and 34,320 were calls concerning other aspects of the Department's services, including General Welfare Assistance and Child Welfare.

One of the factors contributing to a larger than usual increase in the number of calls was an additional visit made in the early months of the fiscal year to each recipient of Old Age Assistance and Blind and Disabled Persons' Allowances who was receiving a partial allowance. On these visits reports were completed which enabled the Welfare Allowances Branch to make the necessary adjustments on the partial cases, taking into account the revised annual income ceilings that came into effect in February, 1962.

As a result of more adequate staffing and closer supervision the amount of outstanding work uncompleted at the end of the year was the lowest yet attained. The average monthly caseload per worker throughout the year decreased from 404 to 396, and the cost per call, exclusive of salaries, increased by one cent to 79c. Higher prices for hotel accommodation and meals may be partially responsible for the slight increase in the cost per call. In serving the public the field staff exceeded 1,400,000 miles in travel by personal automobile.

THE SPECIAL INVESTIGATING UNIT

The Special Investigating Unit has continued to function effectively during the year in locating husbands and fathers who were reported to have deserted their wives and families and to investigate other family cases with serious social and moral problems. This service, which was inaugurated in collaboration with the City of Toronto Department of Public Welfare, is now being used more extensively by other municipal welfare departments although the large majority of General Welfare Assistance cases referred to it are still from the Toronto area. In addition the Unit investigated some Mothers' Allowances desertion cases for the Welfare Allowances Branch.

The Unit is successful in locating over 40 per cent of the cases referred to it. In the fiscal year 959 fathers were located out of the 2,281 cases investigated (42 per cent) and public assistance was either withheld or suspended in about 25 per cent of the total. The trend throughout the year was an increase in the proportion of all cases withheld or suspended.

Of the General Welfare Assistance cases in which the deserting husband was located and assistance suspended or withheld a recent analysis indicated about 25 per cent were found to be living at home and fully employed. In addition the mother was found to be working fulltime and self-supporting or living common-law with another man in 30 per cent of the cases. There appears, therefore, to be a sufficient number of persons receiving assistance under false pretenses to justify the special steps taken by the Department to identify them. A number of these cases were referred to the Courts for further action.

To conclude this report appreciation is expressed to the officials and staff of municipal welfare departments and private welfare agencies in all parts of the province for their co-operation with personnel of the Field Services Branch during the year.

GENERAL WELFARE ASSISTANCE BRANCH

Assistance under the General Welfare Assistance Act and its Regulations was administered by municipal officials and in unorganized areas by the Provincial Regional Welfare Administrators during the fiscal year 1962-1963.

Municipalities were responsible for 20% of payments issued under the General Welfare Assistance Act and were reimbursed by the Province at 80%. The Federal Government contributed 50% of this expenditure. In the unorganized areas the cost of assistance was shared on a 50/50 basis by the two senior levels of Government. There has been no change in the sharable cost of medical services, dental extraction or prosthetic appliances, the amounts incurred being shared solely by the Province of Ontario and the municipalities.

An allowance for Dependent Fathers became effective for subsidy purposes on January 1st, 1963, which is in addition to allowance already in effect.

No changes were made in Regulations covering schedules for pre-added budgets for food, clothing and household sundries.

Shelter allowances in Metropolitan Toronto and in municipalities of 100,000 population and over continues in effect.

MEDICAL

Persons in receipt of General Welfare Assistance continue to be covered for medical services from the doctor of their choice in the home or in the doctor's office.

DENTAL

The cost of emergency extractions, on recommendation of the municipal welfare administrator and assessment by the Director of Dental Services, was shared 20% by the municipality and 80% by the Province.

In unorganized areas such costs are paid 100% by the Province.

ACCOUNTS

In the fiscal year under review there were 977 organized municipalities in the Province and of these 879 or 90% submitted accounts.

Included in the above total were thirty-two (32) cities, all having submitted accounts. Out of 315 towns and villages 293 or 93% submitted accounts and out of 573 townships 540 or 94.2% submitted accounts.

Municipalities rendering accounts increased by 14 over the previous year 1961/62.

EXPENDITURES

The gross expenditure was $35,212,768.00, the Provincial share being $12,382,971.00 with the Federal Government contributing $16,016,722.00 and the municipal share in the amount of $6,813,075.00.

The gross increase over the previous year was $3,262,501.00 or 10.2%.

SUPPLEMENTARY AID

Assistance under this category was issued to persons in receipt of governmental benefits such as Blind Persons' Allowance, Disabled Persons' Allowance, Mothers' Allowance, Old Age Assistance, Old Age Security and Dependent Fathers' Allowance.

This aid was granted mainly on excessively high drug and shelter costs.

The maximum amount payable was $20.00 per month per person on a sharable basis of 80/20, with the Province paying the larger percentage.

NUMBER OF PERSONS ON AID

In March 1963 there were 111,239 persons in receipt of aid while in March 1962 there were 106,345, an increase of 4,894 persons.

PROSTHETIC APPLIANCES

Supply of artificial limbs, braces, etc., in conjunction with the municipalities continues and is proving to be of considerable value to the discharge of persons from hospitals and assists in securing gainful employment.

DESERTIONS

The concentrated effort of the Province and municipalities continues in the location of offenders.

In some cases the couples have been reconciliated and in others it has been necessary to institute court action.

Such procedure has resulted in reducing the number of persons receiving assistance in this category from 6.6% of the total caseload in March 1962 to 6% in March 1963.

TRANSPORTATION

This covers cost of transportation for persons being repatriated to places outside the Province of Ontario and to return deserting husbands. These costs are shared by the municipality and Province on an 80/20 basis with the Province paying the larger percentage.

INTER-PROVINCIAL

Co-operation with other Provinces continues in repatriation of persons to Province of residence.

NURSING HOME CARE

Service in this area is being continued on the basis that the Province pays 80% of up to $100.00 per month for those indigents cared for in a licensed nursing home in Ontario.

Persons in receipt of aid numbered 17,100 in 1961/62 and in 1962/63 this number increased to 19,466 or 13.84%.

In some areas there is a decided improvement in the standards of care provided and it is felt that this will continue.

The homes are visited by a representative of this Branch and complete reports are submitted at regular intervals.

IMMIGRANTS

The Provincial and Federal Government continue to share costs of assistance on an equal basis up to twelve consecutive months residence in a municipality, following which the person or family is considered residents of the municipality for welfare purposes.

INDIANS

Assistance to Indians is unchanged from previous year. There are still thirty-seven (37) Bands administering assistance as municipalities. The administration is covered under the General Welfare Assistance Act and its Regulations.

ECONOMIC REPORT

Quarterly reports were received from the Regional Welfare Administrators which advise of the economic trend in the various large municipalities.

HOMEMAKERS AND NURSES SERVICES

The constant increase in the population of the Province and the increasing numbers of our elderly citizens who require care and assistance in their own homes has resulted in the continued demand for both Homemakers and Nurses Services during the fiscal year ending March 31st, 1963.

There was an increase of 12.7% in expenditures over the previous year, with 23,202 days and 26,324 hours of homemaker assistance granted in the home. The latter total represents service by the hour as opposed to an eight hour day. Registered Nurses made 115,679 visits in the home, performing nursing procedures ordered by the attending physician.

This advanced piece of legislation enables a County or municipality to grant assistance for Home Care Services to families and individuals in cases of illness or other emergencies.

The Province will share with a municipality 50% of the cost in an amount up to $8.00 for an eight hour day or $1.00 per hour for a Homemaker and $2.50 for each visit of a Registered Nurse. The Federal Government does not share in the cost of this program.

Wherever possible the service of the Homemaker or Registered Nurse is purchased from the private agency such as the Visiting Homemaker Association, the Red Cross Society, the Victorian Order of Nurses and the St. Elizabeth Nurses Association. In unorganized areas provision for the service is made through our Regional Welfare Offices.

GENERAL

General Welfare Assistance was granted to persons in needy circumstances during the past year. A number of these made direct applications to this Branch and were given a great deal of help toward receiving the assistance through many municipalities by the advice of representatives of the Department.

Requests for information from many areas inside and outside the Province continues to be a most important part of the overall operation of this Branch.

The Regional Welfare Administrators receive many requests for reports from this office and the co-operation of all welfare administrators is of the highest calibre.

The co-operation of the municipal officials is appreciated and without their assistance the work of this Branch would be increased considerably.

MUNICIPAL HOMES

During this period the total number of beds in municipally operated Homes has increased by 887. This is the second largest increase in any one year since the Homes for the Aged Act came into effect.

Three new Homes were opened, all of which provided fully segregated areas for three types of care. These did not replace existing Homes and increased the number from 56 to 59.

Six additions to existing Homes converted one from the congregate to fully segregated type and two semi-segregated to fully segregated and enlarged three of the fully segregated.

Of the original 35 Municipal Homes, only fifteen now exist and of this number, seven have new additions and can be considered semi-congregate, of the eight remaining, plans have been discussed to have three replaced by new Homes within the next two years making them completely segregate, one will have a new bed-care wing, leaving only five within the Province and it is anticipated that there will be much needed changes in these in the near future.

It is of interest to note that at the end of 1962, exactly 90% of the residents in municipally operated Homes are housed in the newest fully segregated care Homes built within the past twelve years.

CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS

Charitable organizations are not lagging in this area of providing care for the aged. Four complete new Homes were opened in 1962 with a total bed capacity of 693. One was a replacement of an existing Home, the other three added to the growing number of Homes. Two additions to existing Homes were completed adding 80 new beds available or a total of 773.

ELDERLY PERSONS HOUSING

507 new dwelling units were opened in 1962 in five different municipalities. This was by far the largest number of units made available in any one year since the programme began in 1952. A further 748 units were under construction.

SUMMARY

Programming within the Homes for the Aged is growing and improving along with providing accommodation.

During 1962 a course of instruction, covering the area of communication for those aged residents who have suffered strokes, have become senile or are withdrawn to the point where they do not recognize normal social activities, was announced to six municipal Homes who, in turn, each delegated a female staff member to attend the course at our Geriatric Centre. The results of this course were beyond our expectations and as a result the courses are being continued.

The Homes for the Aged Branch have worked with various manufacturers and manufacturers' agents in improving furnishings and equipment suitable to residents in Homes for the Aged and as a result of this co-ordinated effort, many improvements have been made without noticeable increase in cost.

The increase of membership in Ladies Auxiliaries is continuing and the assistance provided within the Homes by those voluntary workers is most gratifying. Our Supervisor of Handicrafts advises that the demand on her time is growing and we feel that another staff member in this area is necessary at this time.

REHABILITATION SERVICES BRANCH

During the past year, the Rehabilitation Services Branch continued to expand its services to an increasing number of handicapped persons. Over 1,300 disabled individuals were referred to the Branch for assistance and all received assessment and counselling services to determine the nature and degree of the handicap and to plan for useful employment. Over 500 persons were provided with courses of training to prepare them for employment, while 115 were employed without training. 295 were placed following training. As in previous years, a substantial number of persons referred for assistance were found to be so seriously disabled as to preclude any possibility of employment placement.

After six years of operation, a new rehabilitation agreement was signed with the Federal Government. This agreement was made possible by the new Vocational Rehabilitation of Disabled Persons Act which was passed the previous year. By adding medical restoration to the already existing services of assessment, counselling, training, and employment placement, this Act, for the first time, provided statutory authority for a comprehensive vocational rehabilitation programme.

Medical restoration includes such services as physiotherapy, speech therapy, and the provision of medically prescribed appliances where such will reduce a person's handicap and facilitate his rehabilitation into useful employment. A beginning was made in organizing this aspect of the programme, and approximately 100 persons received artificial limbs, wheel chairs, hearing aids, physical therapy, corrective surgery, at a cost of, approximately, $15,000. The rapid increase in applications during the latter part of the year gave indication that a rapid growth in this aspect of the programme can be expected.

In addition, the new agreement made provision for expenditures for the training of rehabilitation counsellors, who serve as the primary agent in arranging rehabilitation services. A special in-service training programme was developed and arrangements made to send counsellors to university on an educational leave basis. It is anticipated that this programme will contribute substantially to meeting the acute shortage of rehabilitation counsellors.

Improved employment conditions throughout the year greatly facilitated placement. Unfortunately, limited industrial development in Northern Ontario restricted employment opportunities in this part of the Province, and made it necessary to bring a considerable number of handicapped persons to settle in the larger industrial centres in Southern Ontario.

Similarly, the rehabilitation of mentally ill and mentally retarded continued to present serious problems which have been met only in part by the expansion of sheltered workshops operated by voluntary agencies. Nevertheless, the encouraging growth of workshops has greatly facilitated the rehabilitation of seriously handicapped persons with marginal employability.

A new Special Services Unit for long term unemployed, opened by the Jewish Vocational Service, additional shops opened by the Rehabilitation Foundation for the Disabled, and the expansion of facilities of the Society for Crippled Civilians, Toronto; Amity Rehabilitation Centre, Hamilton; Goodwill Industries, Windsor; Ottawa Neighbourhood Services, Ottawa, made it possible to further the rehabilitation of a greater number of persons suffering from serious physical handicaps, mental illness and mental retardation.

While such workshops and other rehabilitation services involved substantial expenditure, an analysis of the earnings of persons rehabilitated indicate that vocational rehabilitation is one of those social services which provides not only indirect returns in human happiness and welfare, but, also, direct returns to the taxpayer. Thus, in the first year, following rehabilitation, 295 persons earned approximately $730,000 in contrast to the $259,000 which was spent on their rehabilitation.

WELFARE ALLOWANCES BRANCH

The federal-provincial cost sharing programmes of old age assistance, blind persons' allowances and disabled persons' allowances continued to provide a maximum allowance of $65 a month (increased from $55 effective February 1, 1962).

Recipients of these allowances whose liquid assets did not exceed $1,000 if single, or $1,500 if married, were eligible for care under the Department's Medical Welfare Plan and were also insured under the Ontario Hospital Care Insurance Plan (standard ward accommodation) without having to pay premiums.

OLD AGE ASSISTANCE

During the year ended March 31, 1963, an average of 23,591 recipients a month received payments totalling $17,053,111. At the year end there were 23,925 recipients, an increase of 4.6% over the number at March 31, 1962 and amounted to 13.12% of the estimated (DBS) population in the 65-69 year age group. Of 9,213 applications dealt with during the year 7,947 (86.3%) were approved and assistance granted.

BLIND PERSONS' ALLOWANCES

An expenditure of $1,330,767 was made during the fiscal year for allowances to the blind. Payments were made to a monthly average of 1,852 recipients. A review of 353 new applications was completed of which 226 (64.0%) were approved. Of 110 applicants ruled to be ineligible for the allowance, 69.1% were not blind to the degree set out in the definition of blindness under the regulations.

DISABLED PERSONS' ALLOWANCES

During the year ended March 31, 1963, the number of recipients of this allowance increased by 1,124 persons to 14,886. This was an increase of 8.2% over the number at March 31, 1962. Payments during the year amounted to $11,118,696 and were made to an average of 14,380 persons each month.

Of 6,215 new applications reviewed during the year, 2,832 (45.5%) were approved. However, 3,011 applicants were declared to be ineligible—93.3% being ruled not totally and permanently disabled within the meaning of the regulations.

MOTHERS' ALLOWANCES

Under an amendment to the Mothers' Allowances Act which came into force on January 1, 1963, two important changes were made in this programme. First, the allowance may now continue to be paid on behalf of a child who is over the age of 18 if the child is attending a secondary school and is making satisfactory progress with his studies. Previously, the allowance was provided only for children under 18 years of age. Secondly, the provisions relating to the granting of an allowance to a family whose father was unemployable, were transferred to the General Welfare Assistance Act, thereby admitting such cases to the cost sharing arrangements with the federal government under the Unemployment Assistance Agreement. (The responsibility for the administration of such cases is left with the Welfare Allowances Branch). A review of Table 3 will show that 2,805 cases were transferred from Mothers' Allowances to "Dependent Fathers' Allowance" in January 1963.

Beneficiaries under Mothers' Allowances (and Dependent Fathers' Allowances) are provided with medical care under the Medical Welfare Plan and are insured for standard ward accommodation under the Ontario Hospital Care Insurance Plan without having to pay premiums. In addition, all children under 18 years of age are eligible for dental care under the Department's Dental Plan, which covers preventive examinations, extractions, fillings and necessary radiographs and prophylaxes.

Expenditures for Mothers' Allowances during the fiscal year amounted to $12,870,362 and the average monthly caseload was 9,525. An additional expenditure of $1,043,295 was made under the General Welfare Assistance Act for allowances to "dependent fathers" during the period January 1, 1963 to March 31, 1963 to an average monthly caseload of 2,772 for this three month period.

THE SOLDIERS' AID COMMISSION AND THE ONTARIO CANTEEN FUND

I have the honour to submit, herewith, the report of the Soldiers' Aid Commission and the Ontario Canteen Fund. Following the procedure established in my last report, the two funds are considered as one as it is believed that in this way we arrive at a true picture of the assistance made available to Ontario ex-servicemen and women and their dependents.

Thirteen hundred and fifty-three (1,353) grants were made during the fiscal year. By negotiation with creditors and by co-operation with other funds, $108,772.06 in indebtedness was settled at a cost of $64,489.36 to the funds under consideration.

To some extent the type of assistance required is changing as the veterans of World War I advance in years; for instance requests for educational assistance are receding and because of the fact that age makes it difficult for the home owning veteran to maintain repairs requests to assist in building repairs are increasing.

Sixty-nine (69) grants were made to enable house repairs to be carried out while only twenty-two (22) educational grants were made.

The Commissioners and Trustees record their appreciation to members of the medical and dental professions for their ready response to our request for reconsideration of accounts rendered, when an ex-serviceman or woman has found themselves in financial difficulty because of lengthy illness. To the many commercial firms who have enabled us to supply bedding, clothing and household needs at a fraction of the regular cost when a veteran has suffered a disaster such as fire, we record our thanks.

The Ontario Canteen Fund provides the bulk of the money available and it is of interest to look back to 1927 and 1929. In these two years a total of $1,031,381.05 was provided Ontario by the C.E.F. Canteen Funds Act, being 41% of the profits of the Canadian Expeditionary Forces Canteens. Since that time, 138,650 grants have been made totalling $3,099,727.72.

Without the co-operation of the Navy, Army and Air Force Benevolent Funds, the assistance of the Royal Canadian Legion, the Canadian Corps Association and the investigators of the Department of Veterans Affairs and of the Ontario Department of Welfare, the voluntary work of the Commissioners and Trustees would be impossible.

The small but efficient staff consisting of Miss Mary Macaulay, E. R. Seaman, and R. G. Buchanan ably carry on the day to day operations and is solely responsible for interviewing applicants for assistance and for directing some 200 applicants during the year, who did not come within our terms of reference, to the proper source for assistance.

In summary, thirteen hundred and fifty-three (1,353) ex-service people in Ontario were relieved of indebtedness totalling $108,772.06 at a total cost to the Province of $9,440.37 administration and $11,449.63 by way of grants in aid.

Respectfully submitted,

T. M. Medland,
Chairman.

THE CHILDREN'S INSTITUTIONS ACT

As one direct consequence of the Report of The Minister of Public Welfare's Committee on Children's Institutions, a Children's Institutions Act came into force on September 1st, 1963. This Act separated children's institutions from adult institutions and introduced a classification of institutions according to the quality and kind of service provided as well as changing the principles of subsidization. The new Act and its regulations helped to raise the physical standards required in children's institutions, sharpened the requirements for medical and treatment services and has, in essence, heralded a new day for children's institutions in this province.

THE CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS ACT

During the same period, a new Charitable Institutions Act was brought into being which became effective on April 1st, 1964, under which homes for unmarried mothers supervised by the Child Welfare Branch were included.

THE HOMES FOR RETARDED CHILDREN ACT

During the same session, The Homes for Retarded Children Act was also passed, becoming effective on September 1, 1963. This Act provides assistance and regulation for homes specifically operated for the care of retarded children.

THE CHILDREN'S BOARDING HOMES ACT

At the beginning of the fiscal year there were three registered homes under this Act whereas, at the end of the year, there were six. All such homes were providing specialized services for children. The experience of the Child Welfare Branch is that this Act, in an indirect way, has provided a formal means of regulating an otherwise chaotic area of dubious private enterprise and has reduced the number of children's boarding homes operating on a fly-by-night and haphazard basis.

THE CHILD WELFARE ACT

Throughout the year the adoption program in Ontario continued to show improvement, although there were indications in other parts of the continent that, as a result of the population explosion, the number of children available for adoption was exceeding the demand.

As reported in the past several years, the emphasis on services continues to shift from the care of children in foster homes and institutions to the provision of services to children in their own homes. This is, of course, a desirable trend. There is another side to the coin, however. Although fewer children are removed from their own homes, a much higher proportion of those who are so removed exhibit increasingly difficult problems and contribute to what has come to be known as "the-ever-hardening core" of children with critical problems. For these children, due to an affluent economy and a change in social attitudes, suitable foster homes are becoming increasingly hard to secure. Accordingly, as in most other fields, further progress appears to rest in the training of more and more persons in the new knowledge and application of new techniques relevant to the solution of the problems of children and families. It seems further to rest in the establishment of homes, staffed to provide the highly-skilled care and treatment required by small groups of children with critical needs, needs which cannot be met by available foster home resources. Towards these ends there is increasing indication that closer collaboration and co-ordination between public and private effort is required.

It must be said, however, that from a recent comparative survey of the services provided by children's aid societies in 1955 and 1963 it was apparent that, over the period, there was a marked increase in the technical qualifications of the executives responsible for the provision of services, a marked increase in the number of caseworkers employed by the societies and in the resulting services per child, whether the child was served in his own home or cared for by a society. Concurrently, as stated above, there was a marked shift in emphasis from services to children in care of societies to the provision of services to children in their own homes. The result has been a great increase in the rate at which children have been returned to their own homes and in the rate at which they have been placed on adoption. These being the two goals on which the efforts of the societies are principally focussed, if they are the proper goals — as they are believed to be — then the services provided in 1963 were considerably more effective than they were in 1955.

Finally, if the return of a child to his own home or the placement of a child on adoption can be considered as a unit of service, then the taxpayer received 17% more for his Children's Aid dollar in 1963 than he did in 1955.

DAY NURSERIES BRANCH

Three hundred and seventy-two nurseries were under the supervision of the Branch during this period. Ninety-six per cent of these nurseries were licensed. Of the remaining four per cent, several unlicensed nurseries had applied too recently to be awarded a license; a small number were endeavouring to reach adequate standard for licensing and only one nursery had failed to maintain the standard required under the Day Nurseries Act and Regulations. This record was possible due to a policy of concentrated supervision of selected nurseries showing a need for and a willingness to accept special help.

Opportunities for training increased during this period. The Institute of Child Study of the University of Toronto continued to offer its graduate course, and provided teaching staff for other courses. The Institute also made a notable contribution to the training of nursery supervisors by offering a special course for experienced nursery personnel who lacked formal nursery training. This course given in the evenings and in a special summer day-time session enabled more than forty persons to improve their standing in nursery education.

Ryerson Polytechnical Institute lengthened its course to three years, and provided a new demonstration nursery to give its students better facilities for observation and supervised practice.

The most useful development in the training program has been the growth of the extension courses given at various universities in Ontario. These courses will continue to bridge the serious gap between the demand for trained pre-school teachers and the supply of such teachers. These courses are now available from time to time at the University of Toronto, McMaster, Guelph and Queen's. They are given in three separate units, and are aimed at the mature student, often young mothers, who can combine short training courses with their responsibilities as homemakers. Most of these young women work in the half-day nurseries until their families are grown, when they become available for full-time work in the nursery field.

An amendment to the Day Nurseries Act passed in the 1964 session of the Legislature permits the province to share with municipalities in the cost of day care for children up to ten years of age during their out of school hours. Over 200 children are now on this program. For the most part they are children who have progressed through the day nurseries and whose mothers realize that they need a continuance of this type of care through the primary grades. The City of Toronto has pioneered for many years in demonstrating the value of this extension of day nursery care.

The Nursery Education Association of Ontario has been very active in planning for improved conditions for children in nursery care. They have done much to stimulate the extension courses, as they have long recognized that adequate training is the cornerstone of improved standards. They realize that it is important that the nursery profession itself should have a strong voice in the content and nature of training courses. In this way they have given practical support to the work of the Branch.

The Association has also pioneered in a special type of nursery which is planned to help young mothers gain understanding and skills in living with young children. Ten weekly meetings are held with mothers while their children are supervised in a nursery setting. The mothers observe their children playing with others and using the large variety of play materials. The mothers then hold a group discussion covering the basic principles of child care. This plan has been most effective in helping these mothers to create a more harmonious family atmosphere and to develop sound emotional health in their children. Branches of the Association are operating or planning to operate this type of program in Ottawa, Toronto, Kitchener and Sarnia.

Another great need in the nursery profession is the establishment of a system of certification of nursery personnel, so that persons or organizations engaging nursery staff will have a clear idea of the amount of responsibility various persons are able to undertake. At the request of the Branch, the Nursery Education Association of Ontario has been making a thorough study of this problem and is preparing proposals for a voluntary system of certification. Such a plan will give the trained nursery staff in Ontario full recognition for the courses they have taken, and will also enable persons coming here from other provinces and countries to obtain a proper evaluation of their training.

There are now 84 nurseries in Ontario offering all day care, with a capacity of 2,945 children. Sixteen of these nurseries are municipally operated or sponsored, and the municipalities are re-imburSED 50% of the net cost of the nursery by the province.

Efforts have been made to explore the possibilities of nurseries being operated by industries employing large numbers of women. It might well be that at some future time the provision of nursery care will be considered as essential to a large industry as cafeteria service for its employees. Schools and hospitals employing large numbers of professionally trained young women may before long desire to provide for continuity of service by having nurseries operated at or near the place of employment.

One of the most effective ways of combatting the demoralizing effects of economic deprivation has been found to be the provision of half-day nurseries in low income areas. Several such nurseries have received widespread publicity in the United States, but a number of nurseries have been quietly serving our crowded metropolitan areas in Ontario for many years. Mothers who have to manage on very little are heartened at the progress made by their children in these nurseries. The children themselves respond to the stimulating nursery environment, and enter the public school system with an eagerness to learn which largely overcomes the handicap they might otherwise have suffered from a meagre environment. This type of nursery would be valuable in areas of rural poverty and deprivation. It would be interesting to see if it could be usefully set up on some of our Indian reservations.

The Branch has continued to enjoy excellent co-operation from the staffs and governing bodies of nurseries. The efforts of the municipal health, fire and zoning officials have been indispensable to our work. Without this high degree of acceptance and assistance it would not have been possible to give adequate supervision to nearly four hundred nurseries.

FIELD SERVICES BRANCH

The introduction of the new program of assistance to widows and unmarried women 60 years of age and over on May 1st, 1963, was primarily responsible for an unprecedented 21.0 per cent increase in the total caseload of the Field Services Branch during the fiscal year 1963-1964. In addition, however, the total caseload for the other welfare allowances programs increased 7.0 per cent compared to a 2.9 per cent increase the previous year. The comparative percentage increases for each of the programs were as follows:

	Percentage Increase in Caseload Fiscal Year 1963-1964	Fiscal Year 1962-1963
Old Age Assistance	6.7	2.7
Blind Persons' Allowances	1.7	1.2
Disabled Persons' Allowances	8.1	5.3
Mothers' and Dependent Fathers' Allowances	6.7	.4

Numerically, the total caseload increased from 55,478 on March 31st, 1963 to 67,134 on March 31st, 1964. Of the total increase of 11,656, there were 7,804 assistance to widows and unmarried women cases and 3,852 for the other programs:

	March 31st 1964	March 31st 1963
Old Age Assistance	27,963	26,201
Blind Persons' Allowances	2,013	1,979
Disabled Persons' Allowances	17,469	16,162
Mothers' and Dependent Fathers' Allowances	11,885	11,136
Total	59,330	55,478

While the Disabled Persons' Allowances caseload continued to expand at the highest rate the Mothers' and Dependent Fathers' caseload had the most significant increase over the previous year. It is noted also the rate of increase for Old Age Assistance almost tripled the rate of increase in 1962-1963.

Delays in obtaining additional staff to complete applications and collateral documents for the large number of applicants under the widows and unmarried women's program created a critical backlog of work for the field staff during the year. Overdue work reached a peak in September and October when there were over 900 requests for applications dating back to June which had not been investigated and much of the routine reporting on active cases had to be delayed while the staff concentrated their efforts on taking applications. At the end of the fiscal year there were still 600 new applicants to be visited and over 2,300 other overdue reports to be made. Fortunately, with the acquisition and training of a sufficient number of new personnel it is anticipated the outstanding work can be brought up to date within six months.

The marked growth in the number of calls and visits made by the Field Staff in the 17 regions of the Branch during the year illustrates the increasing volume of work. In 1962-1963 the staff made 246,679 calls, up 5,865 from the preceding year; in 1963-1964, 269,830 calls were made for an increase of 23,151. The widows and unmarried women's program accounted for 24,422 calls and the other welfare allowances programs for 211,484. The balance, 33,924, were in relation to General Welfare Assistance, Child Welfare, and other aspects of the Department's services.

The average monthly caseload per worker throughout the year was 426, an increase of 30 per worker over that for 1962-1963. In the Metropolitan Toronto and York County Region, which had over 3,300 of the 7,800 widows and unmarried women's cases, the average monthly caseload per worker was 503.

The cost for each call or visit, exclusive of salaries, decreased from 79c to 67c, and the total mileage accumulated by the field staff in serving the general public was approximately 1,456,000 miles.

The Special Investigating Unit continued to have a large measure of success in locating deserting husbands and fathers whose wives and families applied for or were receiving public assistance. This important service is now being used by an increasing number of municipal welfare departments and other social agencies. The City of Toronto and the suburban municipalities near Toronto, however, continue to account for approximately 50 per cent of the referrals.

The total number of investigations carried out by the Unit during the year was 2,413 and 1,013 or 42 per cent of the deserting husbands and fathers were located. (It is of interest to note this is the same percentage of deserters the Unit was able to locate in 1962-1963.) Of the 1,013 located, public assistance payments were either suspended or withheld in 780 cases, about 500 being General Welfare Assistance and the rest Mothers' and Dependent Fathers' Allowances. While no accurate estimate of the resulting savings in expenditure of public funds can be made it was probably a minimum of $75,000. Additional savings also accrue from the deterrent effect the services of the Unit have on desertion and particularly on collusive desertion.

An analysis for a nine-month period of General Welfare Assistance cases where the husband was located and assistance withheld or suspended indicated the husband was found to be living in the home and fully employed in 26.4 per cent of the families. In 20.8 per cent of the cases the mother was found to be living in a common-law union with another man and in another 20.8 per cent she was employed with her earnings making assistance unnecessary. Where appropriate the municipalities concerned instituted court action against the applicants or recipients who were receiving assistance by fraudulent means.

Personnel in the Field Services Branch have a close working relationship with the officials and staffs of municipal welfare departments, private social agencies and other departments of the provincial government in all parts of the Province. Their continuing cooperation with our Department is gratefully acknowledged.

GENERAL WELFARE ASSISTANCE BRANCH

During the fiscal year ending March 31, 1964, welfare assistance under the General Welfare Assistance Act was provided to residents of Ontario by municipal officials, or in the unorganized areas by representatives of the Provincial Department of Public Welfare.

In the bulk of assistance provided through municipal administration under this Act, the cost is shared in the ratio of 20% municipal, 30% provincial and 50% federal. In the unorganized areas the cost is borne by the two senior levels of government on a 50/50 basis with the Province providing administrative services.

Certain specific types of assistance under the Act provide a variation in reimbursement to the municipality because the Federal subsidy is not available. This applies particularly to prosthetic appliances where 50% reimbursement is paid. Although the Government of Canada does not share in Medical Services and Dental Care under the Act, the Province assumes the 80% cost in these areas.

Effective from May 1, 1963 an allowance was provided to Widows and Unmarried Women over the age of 60 years in a manner and at a rate similar to Old Age Assistance, Blind and Disabled recipients of Welfare Allowances. This is administered by the Province as an addition to the other Welfare Allowances.

MEDICAL

Recipients of General Welfare Assistance continue to receive treatment in their homes or their doctor's office under an agreement between the Province and the Ontario Medical Association.

DENTAL

Emergency extractions continued to be provided to indigent persons recommended by the municipal welfare administrator. The rate, assessed by the Director of Dental Services, is shared on an 80/20 basis by the Province and municipality. The Province bears full approved cost in unorganized areas.

MUNICIPAL ACCOUNTS

In the 1963-64 year there were 978 organized municipalities in Ontario. Of these 865 or 88.4% submitted accounts to the Province for reimbursement.

These municipalities included 32 cities, 282 towns or villages and 574 townships. For the first time two counties submitted accounts thereby eliminating statements from 20 towns, villages and townships which they serve. This explains in part a decrease of 14 municipalities sending accounts over the previous year.

EXPENDITURES

The gross expenditure was $43,973,057. This was distributed as follows: Federal Government — $19,540,367. Municipal share — $8,794,614. and the Province of Ontario $15,638,076. This represented a gross increase of $8,760,289. over the previous year, a total of 24.9%.

SUPPLEMENTARY AID

Recipients of Governmental benefits such as Old Age Security, Old Age Assistance, Blind and Disabled Persons' Allowances, Mothers' Allowance etc., may be provided with this form of assistance to help with excessive shelter, drugs or other extraordinary cost.

The maximum shareable is $20.00 per month, with the municipality contributing 20% of the amount paid and the senior governments reimbursing the balance.

REHABILITATION

Artificial limbs, braces, orthopaedic shoes etc. have been supplied by municipalities where such appliances were required. The Province shares this cost on a 50/50 basis with the municipality. This is a necessary restorative measure which has had gratifying results particularly when utilized as part of a family program.

Special training classes, books, etc. have also been paid on this basis, where other avenues of rehabilitation have not been open.

TRANSPORTATION

Certain individual and family needs can be best met by arranging for the repatriation of the persons to places outside the Province. Where this is possible the Province shares the cost on an 80/20 basis with the municipality.

Each month a number of families were repatriated to their former place of residence with their approval and with the concurrence of the authorities at their destination.

In addition similar transportation costs were met to bring deserting husbands before the Courts for maintenance hearings.

NURSING HOME CARE

The Department of Public Welfare has continued to share in the cost of maintenance for needy persons in municipally licensed nursing homes. Participation is to 80% of a maximum of $100.00 cost to the municipality.

During 1963-64 the number of persons in receipt of such care rose to 20,864 an increase of 1,398 or 7.2% over the previous year.

INDIANS

Assistance to Indian Bands continues as before. There are 37 of these Bands operating in the same manner as a municipality. This form of administration is approved under the General Welfare Assistance Act.

ECONOMIC REPORTS

Reports are received from Regional Administrators about the Province showing various economic features of the Regions which have a bearing on municipal welfare rolls.

HOMEMAKERS AND NURSES SERVICES

The growth of the Homemakers and Nurses Services program which began in 1958 has been unrelenting. Municipalities have become aware of the benefits derived from granting assistance to certain families and individuals. The service has proven to be effective in a broad range of situations.

Homemaker Service can hold a family together in times of short-term or chronic illness, hospitalization, convalescence, desertion, death or other stresses.

- It will permit the employed father to keep his job when his wife is unable to care for her home and children.
- It will enable the working mother to keep her job when she is the breadwinner and there is no one to care for her ill children or elderly parent.
- It can strengthen family life by raising the level of living and prevent the development of serious social and emotional problems which may threaten to scar the children.

A homemaker going into the home of an elderly couple or individual for possibly a half day a week or longer, to do the shopping, tidy the home and do some cooking can prevent for months or possibly years, the need for care in a Nursing Home, Home for the Aged or other such institution.

Likewise, a Registered Nurse going into the home of certain families and individuals on a visitation basis, to carry out a nursing procedure at the request of the attending physician, may allow for earlier discharge from, or prevent admission to, an active treatment hospital, chronic unit or other similar facility.

These services administered in the home, have and will continue to prolong independent living in the community for many of our aged and disabled persons.

It has been demonstrated that in appropriate cases, there is a significant saving in costs over the alternative programs of foster home and institutional care.

In the fiscal year ending March 31, 1964, there was an increase of 15.3% in expenditure over the previous year.

28,880 days and 29,500 hours of homemaker service assistance were granted to 4,629 adults and 9,983 children in their homes. 129,900 nursing visits were made by a Registered Nurse to carry out a nursing procedure in the home.

The Homemakers and Nurses Services Act, is indeed a progressive piece of Legislation, and the present trend would indicate there will be, in the future, increased developments in this field of Home Care Services throughout the Province.

It is fitting at this time to pay a brief tribute to Mr. Arthur T. Bosanquet who died on February 19, 1964.

He was known and respected by municipal officials throughout the Province.

Mr. Bosanquet had served as Director of this Branch for the past 12 years and had completed 31 years of service with the Province of Ontario.

MUNICIPAL HOMES

During this period the total number of beds in municipally operated Homes has increased by 405 as a result of additions to five existing Homes.

Two new Homes with a total of 350 beds were under construction. One of these was a replacement of an existing Home and the other was an addition to the growing list of Homes.

Also under construction were three additions and/or extensions to existing Homes which will mean an additional 250 beds.

Plans were being drawn for three new Homes, one of which will be a modern segregated type of Home to replace an old congregate type of Home and the other two will be modern segregated care type of Homes to be added to the total number of Homes in the Province. These three Homes will have a total of 563 beds. At the same time plans were being drawn for additions and/or extensions to three modern segregated type of Homes involving a total of 226 beds.

When the above mentioned programme is completed there will only remain 12 of the original 35 Municipal Homes and of these 4 already have new additions which have converted them into semi-segregated Homes. The total number of Homes will have increased from 35 to 62 and the total number of beds available from 2,998 to 11,758. This means that the number of beds available will have quadruplicated in 16 years.

Seven complete new Homes and three additions and/or extensions were also being contemplated.

It is of interest to note that at the end of 1963 approximately 91.5% of the residents in municipally operated Homes were housed in the newest fully segregated care Homes, 3.8% in semi-segregated Homes and only 4.7% in the old congregate care type of Home.

It is also of interest to note that during this year the number of beds available for residents in municipally operated Homes passed the 10,000 mark.

Residents requiring bed or semi-bed care continue to increase in numbers. At the end of 1963, 41.7% of all the residents in the Homes required this type of care compared with 38.7% at the end of 1962. Of the total increase in residents of 657 during 1963, 523 were classified as requiring bed or semi-bed care.

CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS

Charitable organizations continue to play an important role in providing care for the aged. Three complete new Homes with a bed capacity of 94 were opened in 1963. All three were additions to the growing number of Homes. Two additions and/or extensions with a total of 24 beds were made to existing Homes.

Two complete new Homes with a total of 284 beds were under construction. Both were replacements of existing smaller Homes. Deducting the 114 beds at present in the present Homes, the net increase in the number of beds to be provided will be 170. Also under construction were 2 additions and/or extensions with a total of 15 beds.

Plans were being drawn for 5 new Homes and 3 additions and/or extensions. Also 5 complete new Homes were being contemplated but had not yet reached the stage where plans were being drawn.

ELDERLY PERSONS HOUSING

236 new complete dwelling units were opened in 1963 in 11 different municipalities. A further 1,509 were under construction. The latter figure is by far the largest in any one year since the programme began in 1952.

SUMMARY

Not only is increased and improved accommodation in the Homes being provided but, at the same time, a great deal is being done to make life full and happy for the residents.

In last year's Report mention was made of a course of instruction being introduced during that year covering the area of the alleviation of ruptured communications in elderly persons who have suffered strokes, become senile or withdrawn to the point where they do not recognize normal social activities. It was mentioned that six Homes had delegated a female staff member to attend the course at our Geriatric Centre.

This Course produced such remarkable results that during 1963 thirty Homes sent female staff members to the Course. Almost all, without exception, have been extremely successful in bringing new life and enjoyment by re-establishing communication. This has not only meant a great deal to the resident concerned but Superintendents, Physicians and Charge Nurses have remarked on the resultant upswing and increased optimism of all members of the staffs of their Homes.

The fostering of the growth of Ladies' Auxiliaries continues to be an important part in the programme of the Branch and the assistance provided within the Homes by these voluntary workers is most gratifying. A second staff member has been taken on to assist our Supervisor of Handicraft in maintaining a close contact with and giving encouragement to these Auxiliaries.

REHABILITATION SERVICES

This second year of experience under the new Federal-Provincial Vocational Rehabilitation Agreement has seen the provision of a broader range of services to a greater number of handicapped persons. Some 1575 new cases were referred to the Branch for assistance and all received assessment and counselling services to determine the nature and degree of the handicap and to plan for useful employment. As in previous years, so seriously disabled as to preclude any possibility of employment so seriously diseased as to preclude any possibility of employment placement.

The seven basic services made available under the Rehabilitation Services Act include:

(1) Assessment: The initial step in the rehabilitation process involves medical, social and vocational diagnosis to

- (a) determine the degree and extent of disability;
- (b) establish a client's eligibility under the programme;
- (c) determine the need for additional medical services;
- (d) help evaluate an individual's work capacity.

As a general rule, the Branch relies on the patient's attending physician to provide this medical assessment, but frequently, this may be supplemented by specialist consultation or evaluation at a rehabilitation centre.

(2) Medical Restoration: A primary objective of rehabilitation services is to restore the disabled person to maximum functioning by either eliminating or mitigating his physical or mental impairment. This is accomplished by providing medical, surgical, psychiatric care, artificial appliances, therapy, and other medical and related services.

While many of the handicapped persons referred to the Branch have already received complete medical attention financed by the Ontario Hospital Services Commission or Physician's Services Incorporated, our counsellors found it necessary to finance treatment and appliances for 302 people at a cost of approximately $50,000 during the fiscal year 1963/64. Substantially fuller implementation of this aspect of the programme has been achieved during the past year and further utilization is being anticipated in the year to follow.

(3) Counselling and Guidance: Individual counselling and guidance through all steps of the rehabilitation process to help the disabled person select and attain the right job objective. During the fiscal year 1963/64, over 3000 persons received such help. At the present time, the active caseload is over 2500 (an increase of 22 percent over 1962/63).

(4) Vocational Training: While it is possible for some handicapped individuals to return to former occupations following medical rehabilitation, many are forced to learn new trades because of functional limitations.

With the exception of counselling, vocational training continued to be the most extensive service provided and involved an expenditure of over $486,201.68 on tuition, books and supplies, transportation and maintenance during training. At the end of the fiscal year 1963/64, 459 handicapped persons were undergoing courses of training. Clerical occupations continue to provide more training and placement opportunities than in any other single course of employment, but a growing emphasis on training-on-the-job methods is opening up more opportunities for the handicapped in other fields which, hitherto, were not available. With 22.8 per cent of this training being conducted by on-the-job techniques, Ontario leads the way in the utilization of this method of rehabilitation.

Developing on-the-job training projects makes extensive demands on the time of rehabilitation counsellors, both in locating and supervising training opportunities. However, this time is well spent as it makes available unique opportunities for handicapped persons who frequently lack educational qualifications to undertake standard training programmes provided by the Province's technical schools. On-the-job training projects included

Lens grinding	Electric motor repair
Wood refinishing	Pressing
Welding	Limbmaking
Production Supervisor	Sign painting
Upholstering	Stone setting
Stationary engineering	Electrical appliance servicing
X-ray technician	Dental mechanic

(5) Maintenance and transportation during the provision of training and restorative services. Approximately two-thirds of the clients attending courses of training also receive maintenance allowances.

(6) Occupational Tools: Equipment and tools as necessary to give the person a fair start. Barbers, watchmakers, electrical equipment repairmen were among those trainees who were provided the necessary tools. One paraplegic who was confined to a wheelchair was helped to start a thriving electric repair shop in Owen Sound.

(7) Placement on the right job and follow-up after placement to ensure stability of employment. During the fiscal year 1963/64, 139 handicapped persons were placed directly into employment, while 415 were successfully employed following training or the provision of restorative treatment and orthopaedic appliances. Improved employment conditions have greatly facilitated the placement of the handicapped, but have also created problems. Many persons with lesser disabilities have been able to become rehabilitated without the help of organized programmes. This leaves a great number of referrals consisting of more seriously handicapped persons suffering from mental illness or mental retardation and long term recipients of public assistance. While successful rehabilitation of such persons is more rewarding than that of the less seriously disabled, success is less assured and greater demands are made on the time and skill of the rehabilitation counsellor.

CO-OPERATION WITH VOLUNTARY AGENCIES AND EXPANSION OF FACILITIES

Successful rehabilitation can never be achieved by the efforts of one agency alone, but only through the co-operation of government and voluntary services. Under the Federal-Provincial Vocational Rehabilitation Agreement, the Rehabilitation Services Branch has been charged with the responsibility of encouraging and co-ordinating the work of voluntary agencies and the development of this co-operation has always been a cornerstone of the Branch's policy. Through judicious purchase of services from private agencies and, particularly, sheltered workshops, the Branch has endeavoured to both co-ordinate and stimulate the development of facilities which may be utilized on behalf of the handicapped.

In this connection, one of the most helpful developments has been the rapid expansion of workshops for the mentally retarded. At the time of the commencement of the provincial programme in 1957, there were practically no facilities. By the end of this fiscal year, the number of workshop facilities for the retarded in Ontario totalled nearly thirty. Six of these have reached the stage in their development where they can prepare retarded young adults for gainful employment and have been approved by the Branch as eligible to receive financial assistance in the form of fees for services.

Two particularly interesting pilot projects have been developed in London and Hamilton. In London, the workshop, in co-operation with the local Health Department and the local Home for the Aged, has developed a special training programme for kitchen and cleaning helpers. In Hamilton, the Amity Rehabilitation Centre is preparing young retarded girls for special employment in factories. The growth of such programmes for the mentally ill has been less spectacular and has long been confined to the services of the Jewish Vocational Service in Toronto. Under the leadership of the Ontario Branch of the Canadian Mental Health Association, plans are being developed for workshops in London and Ottawa.

STAFF DEVELOPMENT

The rehabilitation counsellor is the key agent in any vocational rehabilitation programme. The success or failure to restore handicapped persons to useful employment is, in large measure, dependent on the numbers and quality of rehabilitation counsellors. Without sufficient numbers of counsellors, services and financial assistance authorized by Legislation cannot be made available to persons entitled to this assistance. Poorly qualified staff result in inadequate assessment, waste of public funds, poorly selected training programmes, and frustration and failure to the handicapped person.

In view of the critical importance of staff, the federal government embodied provision for sharing in the cost of training rehabilitation counsellors as an integral part of its Legislation and the Agreement with the Province. The Department has made extensive use of this provision, without which it would have been impossible to obtain and develop necessary staff. Rehabilitation counsellors cannot be hired from the open labour market as can teachers, nurses, accountants, lawyers etc. A special training programme has been developed in co-operation with the School of Social Work of the University of Toronto. This programme has been based on a three-fold approach:

(1) the recruitment of graduate social workers who are then provided with a special in-service training programme in the vocational aspects of rehabilitation;

(2) recruitment of university graduates without postgraduate training who are provided with a special in-service training programme and, subsequently, given financial assistance to complete their professional training at the University;

(3) the establishment of a Field Instruction Unit in rehabilitation counselling for students attending the University of Toronto School of Social Work, thus enabling the University to begin to train counsellors for this growing field of employment. The cost of this training programme, as with all other aspects of rehabilitation, is shared on a fifty per cent basis by the federal government.

VALUE OF REHABILITATION

The extent to which Ontario's rehabilitation programme can improve the economic status of handicapped persons, increase the Province's productive potential and relieve some of the dependency on public assistance was strikingly shown by a review of a group of 346 of the persons who were rehabilitated following the provision of vocational training and restoration services. These persons rehabilitated in 1964 will, on a projection of their earnings for the first year of employment, pump more than $850,000 in to the Province's economy. Placing this against the approximate $900 per trainee expended by the Branch, we find that for each $1 of cost, there were earnings of $2.75 — an excellent return. The above does not include the earnings of those handicapped persons who were placed directly in employment, or who, as a result of rehabilitation services, became employed as homebound or family workers on no wages but contributed to the family income.

THE SOLDIERS' AID COMMISSION AND THE ONTARIO CANTEEN FUND

I have the honour to submit, herewith, the report of the Soldiers' Aid Commission and the Ontario Canteen Fund. Conforming to the practice established in recent years the two Funds are considered as one in making the annual report.

The Kathleen Hammond Fund (amounting to $174,170.46 at the end of the fiscal year under consideration) is reserved for assistance to widows whose husbands died in action or died as a result of service in the First World War. The Commissioners decided that it would be desirable to establish the extent to which this Fund would be called upon in future years with a view to seeking legislation to broaden the terms of reference for the bequest.

The assistance of the Honourable Minister of Veterans Affairs was sought and a list of names of widows drawing Widows Pension, and who are resident in Ontario, was secured. The preparation of this list was not a simple matter and the Commissioners express gratitude to the Minister and the members of his staff for the completion of an onerous task. The discovery that there are more than five thousand (5,000) widows of men who were either killed in action or died as a result of service in the First World War resident in Ontario who, if in need, are eligible to apply for assistance from the Kathleen Hammond Fund caused the realization that there is no possible justification for broadening the terms of reference at the present time. The Commissioners ceased to consider possible legislation.

To make the maximum use of the list of names provided and to conform to what we believe to be the wish of the late Kathleen Hammond, a survey is being undertaken to establish the extent to which need, if any, exists. The Commission does not have the resources to carry out such a survey and an appeal was directed to the Honourable Louis Cecile, Minister of Welfare, for assistance. Aid was promptly promised and at the time of writing this report the survey is under way.

Grants made by the Soldiers' Aid Commission to veterans or their dependents amounted to $19,069.17. It should be noted that this does not reflect the total assistance made available as, by negotiation by our small staff, accounts owing by veterans and dependents have been drastically reduced before payment was made. Substantial reduction of the cost to the Commission has also been achieved by seeking assistance from other available funds.

It is well at this point to record the appreciation of the Commissioners and of the Trustees to the Navy, Army and Air Force Benevolent Funds for their readiness to share the cost of effecting relief when their terms of reference permit. Appreciation is also due to members of the medical and dental professions for their co-operation. Merchants and Finance Companies have been most helpful in arranging settlements that have enabled the funds available to be used to the greatest advantage and conserved as far as possible to meet future needs.

Grants made by the Ontario Canteen Fund amounted to $41,101.30 and the same comments made in reference to the Soldiers' Aid Commission apply to this amount.

A total of 1,853 grants were made and a breakdown is attached. It will be noted that 70 grants made by the Canteen Fund were for house repairs. This number increases from year to year and it is evident that the veteran, while able to move about freely and actively, looked after the maintenance of his home. The ability to re-roof a house or climb a ladder decreases with advancing age and the average age of the World War I veteran is 70 years.

The Commissioners and Trustees record with the deepest regret the passing of Commissioner Stanley Harpham. Mr. Harpham's devotion to any task to aid a veteran was unlimited and his passing has left a void that will not be filled.

The task of the Commissioners and Trustees would be all but impossible if it were not for the dedication to their job by Messrs. Seaman and Buchanan and by Miss Mary Macauley who are the staff of both Funds.

Our appreciation is extended to the Royal Canadian Legion, the Canadian Corps Association, the Department of Veterans Affairs and to the Ontario Department of Welfare whose field people have been so helpful in making investigations that are so material in an accurate assessment of problems placed before us.

Particular mention is made of the helpful advice given throughout by Mr. James S. Band, the Deputy Minister of the Department of Welfare.

Attached are the Auditors' statements of both Funds for the fiscal year covered by this report.

Respectfully submitted,

T. M. Medland,

Chairman.

WELFARE ALLOWANCES BRANCH

Grants up to a maximum of $75 monthly (increased from $65 December 1, 1963) continued to be provided under the federal-provincial cost sharing programs of Old Age Assistance, Blind and Disabled Persons' Allowances.

Premium free hospital insurance coverage, for standard ward care and medical services were available to those recipients whose liquid assets did not exceed $1,000 if single, and $1,500 if married.

OLD AGE ASSISTANCE

A monthly average of 24,373 recipients obtained payments totalling $18,403,362 during the year ended March 31, 1964. Assistance was granted in respect of 8,242 (87.7%) of the 9,404 applications dealt with during the year. The number of recipients at the year's end was 25,197, representing a 5.3% increase over the number at March 31, 1963 and accounted for 13.61% of the estimated population in the 65-69 year age group.

BLIND PERSONS' ALLOWANCES

During the fiscal year, payments were made to a monthly average of 1,880 recipients for a total expenditure of $1,401,789. Two hundred and eighty-five new applications were reviewed, of which 183 (64.2%) were approved. Sixty-seven percent or 85 persons failed to meet the test of blindness as specified in the regulations.

DISABLED PERSONS' ALLOWANCES

The number of persons receiving this form of aid increased during the year ended March 31, 1964 by 1,052 persons to 15,938, an increase of 7.1% over the number at March 31, 1963.

A monthly average of 15,352 persons received payments totalling $12,414,628 during the year. Approval was given to 2,866 applications (50.6%) of the 5,659 reviewed during the year. Of the 2,478 ruled to be ineligible, 91.9% could not be certified as having total and permanent disability as defined by the regulations.

WELFARE ALLOWANCES BRANCH

ASSISTANCE TO WIDOWS AND UNMARRIED WOMEN

This program came into effect in May, 1963 and provides assistance, under the General Welfare Assistance Act, to widows, unmarried women, and certain married women who satisfy basic eligibility requirements and who are at least sixty years of age. An average of 3,760 women received this aid monthly, and payments totalling $2,423,357 were made in the year ending March 31, 1964.

At the year end there were 6,798 recipients, 75.8% of these being in the 60-64 age group. During the year 8,873 applications were received, 89% of these (7,231) were approved and assistance granted.

MOTHERS' AND DEPENDENT FATHERS' ALLOWANCES

During the year there was a monthly average of 24,794 beneficiaries of Mothers' Allowances on whose behalf an expenditure of $11,130,250 was made.

A further $4,423,606 was expended under The General Welfare Assistance Act in respect of Dependent Fathers' Allowances to a monthly average of 2,823 families.

At March 31, 1964, of the 10,700 families receiving assistance under these programs, 3,697 (34.6%) had one child, 2,659 (24.8%) had two children, 1,796 (16.8%) had three children, and eighteen families had eleven or more children.

REPORT OF THE DEPUTY MINISTER

Minister of Public Welfare.

I have the honour to submit herewith the Thirty-Fourth Annual Report of the Department of Public Welfare.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

CHILD WELFARE BRANCH

In the year 1953, the number of children taken into protective care by children's aid societies, began a gradual decline and by 1963 it had been reduced by 21.3% over the period. This figure shows up rather sharply against an overall population increase in Ontario of 34.3% for the same period and a 49.1% increase in the population of children under sixteen years of age.

The more obvious factors which may be cited to explain this remarkable decline are: improved welfare services in general—including services to children, policy changes affecting both adoption and services to children in their own homes, and a vigorously expanding economy. However, as we shall see, economic changes have revealed new problems which may be very difficult to solve.

During 1963 the decline levelled off and by the end of 1964 a substantial rise was again recorded and maintained into 1965. It appears fairly certain that the factors underlying the reverse trend over the decade 1953-63 have lost their force and we may now expect a gradual increase from year to year within the coming period.

The reduction in children coming into protective care came largely from families who could be helped relatively simply through direct financial assistance or short-term placement and counselling services. Those who remain are from the so-called "hard-core", multi-problem families, and the rapidly growing group of unmarried mothers. The multi-problem families are often culturally deprived, many of below average intelligence and having above the average number of children, with wage earners who are generally unskilled and of low income potential. Consequently, they also tend to be demoralized, and detached from the standards and values of society. Furthermore, the technological revolution has, for many of them, made employment opportunities even fewer.

It may be seen, then, that the problems of this large and rapidly growing segment of the population, go well beyond the limits of child welfare legislation or even of general welfare legislation. It seems likely that an integrated program involving the Departments of Education, Health and Labour, as well as the Department of Public Welfare, may be required in the future. In the meantime, we have already taken a step forward in child welfare services with the presentation of the Report of the Minister's Advisory Committee on Child Welfare, in June, 1964. This Report may well contribute to far reaching legislative changes in the child welfare field.

Training facilities for workers in child welfare agencies are inadequate to meet the current demand and appear to be falling behind in their capacity to provide trained staff. Expansion of these facilities could be the key factor in the work of the future.

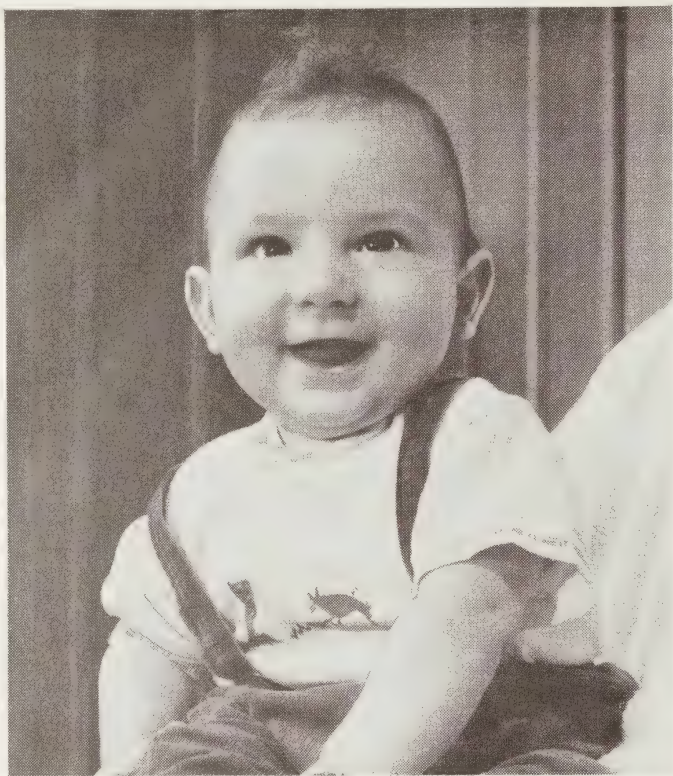

Apart from its support of general social work education, the Department of Public Welfare, in conjunction with the Association of Children's Aid Societies, sponsors three job-oriented courses for children's aid society personnel. During this fiscal year these courses comprised a ninth basic training course with an attendance of 20, a third advanced training course with an attendance of 24, and, a first supervisors' course with an attendance of 15—a total of 119 students in all.

The basic course is for children's aid personnel with less than one year's experience on the job who are not graduate social workers. The advanced training course is also for non-graduate social workers with two or more year's experience on the job, or who are graduates of the basic course. The first supervisors' course was a distinct success with immediate benefits to the services in their agencies and plans are being made to continue this course along with the others.

Institutional services to children are, if anything, in greater demand than other children's services. During the year, the Child Welfare Branch supervised thirty-nine institutions for children and youth approved under The Children's Institutions Act, The Homes for Retarded Children Act, and The Charitable Institutions Act, and six privately operated boarding homes approved under The Children's Boarding Homes Act. These institutions and homes provided accommodation for a total of 1,289 children.

Financial assistance from the Province was increased to the twenty-one institutions, including those caring for emotionally disturbed children approved under The Children's Institutions Act, effective August 1st, 1964. Up to 50% of the net cost of care was available to the institutions on behalf of children placed by their parents, where parents were unable to meet the full cost of care.

Institutions have attempted to improve services to children in care and to their parents. Board of Directors of many institutions have been able to employ staff who have specialized training for their work and have also had previous experience working with children. Increasing emphasis is being placed on employing trained child care staff, although the number available for employment is small.

"Today's Child" is a feature that appears daily in the Toronto Telegram. The newspaper has sponsored this adoption advertisement since the Spring of 1964 in co-operation with the Department of Public Welfare.

Miss Helen Allen has written the text and obtained photographs of the children available. The feature has attracted much favourable public interest and hundreds of persons have written to enquire about adopting a child. In recognition of her service to children, Miss Allen was, in May 1965, presented with a Scroll of Commendation by the Honourable John Robarts, Prime Minister of Ontario.

"Today's Child" is continuing as a public service feature of the Telegram and other newspapers are also beginning to print the item. It has been of incalculable benefit in bringing together children who need a permanent home and parents who are eager to offer them this security.

DAY NURSERIES BRANCH

The number of nurseries under supervision in this period was four hundred and three, as compared with three hundred and seventy-two the previous year. At the end of the period three hundred and thirty-six nurseries were licensed and twenty were unlicensed. Of the unlicensed nurseries, nine were still awaiting final municipal approval, five had inadequate staff, and six had applied too recently to have completed the licensing process.

During the year fifty-five nurseries opened, and forty-seven closed. The reasons for nurseries closing were as follows:

Premises unsuitable	19
Transferred to educational auspices	12
Supervisor unavailable	8
Low enrolment	7
Unknown	1

Preliminary applications for new nurseries increased fifty percent over the previous year, reflecting increased public interest in the provision of nursery services for young children.

Difficulty in finding suitable premises for nurseries is general throughout the province. Only seventeen nurseries are in buildings especially constructed for the needs of this work. Half-day nursery schools and kindergartens may be readily accommodated in churches, spare classrooms, public halls and recreation centres. To an increasing extent these groups are willing to share their premises with nurseries. On the other hand, the day nursery program for working mothers, in active operation from about 7.30 a.m. to 6 p.m., five days a week, really requires premises not shared to any extent by other groups. If zoning and fire regulations permit, older houses may be converted to make suitable premises, but the ideal solution requires extensive alterations or new construction.

Greater recognition is being given to the importance of nursery programs to young children suffering from any type of handicap. There are now three nurseries licensed by this department planned to help deaf and hard-of hearing children. Special equipment and highly trained staff help these children and their families to adjust to this handicap. Two centres are devoted to the needs of the crippled and cerebral palsied children. Three nurseries are deeply interested in the problems of children with severe emotional disorders. Several nurseries are being set up with the particular needs of the severely retarded in mind. The Canadian National Institute for the Blind has pioneered in giving supervision to blind children in their own homes, so that their special needs may be recognized and met from the time that this condition is first diagnosed. It is their policy to have blind children admitted to ordinary nursery schools so that their personality development may be as normal as possible. To this end, the pre-school specialists on the staff of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind give guidance to the staff of the nursery when a blind child is enrolled. Nearly every nursery has one or two children with some type of handicap. In this way a great many children with handicaps are helped early in life to learn that while they may differ from most children in one particular respect, still they have a great deal in common with other children and can experience much joy and satisfaction from associating with them.

We are becoming increasingly aware that all children benefit from at least a few hours a week in group care, but that there are certain groups, in addition to the handicapped children described above, for whom nursery experience does much to overcome the disadvantages of crowded homes and lack of outdoor play space. These are the families least able to pay for nursery care, and it is fortunate that their needs have been recognized by many settlement houses and downtown churches.

It is evident that more and more mothers of young children are finding it necessary to work outside the home. If this trend continues, places that employ women may want to consider providing nursery service in the same way that they now provide cafeterias and other amenities for the well-being of their employees. Where there is a shortage of highly trained personnel, particularly in the nursing and teaching fields, day nurseries may be very useful to the children, their parents and the employing agency. One hospital in Toronto has secured the services of forty competent nurses and other personnel by providing nursery service on the premises. It gives the mothers a great sense of security to know that they are so close to their children.

During this period the Branch commenced work on plans for a nursery in Moosonee for young Indian children and their mothers. This nursery will be a pioneer project in Canada and will help to give these children a better start in life.

The Nursery Education Association of Ontario has continued its activities on behalf of young children, supported in part by a grant from this Department. A feature of this year has been the arranging of in-service courses for persons already working in nurseries. In the Toronto area forty-one persons have completed this course, and in London seventeen persons are nearing the end of their training. The Association plans to grant certificates for these courses as well as the other courses which are given regularly through the Institute of Child Study, Ryerson Polytechnical Institute and the Extension Departments of various universities. In this way, persons seeking to hire staff for nurseries will be able to find qualified staff.

The continued interest and support of the municipal officials in the more than hundred municipalities where nurseries are located is much appreciated by the Branch.

FIELD SERVICES BRANCH

The total caseload of the Field Services Branch increased 7.1 per cent in the course of the fiscal year ending March 31st, 1965. All programs except Blind Persons' Allowances showed an increase with assistance to widows and unmarried women 60 years of age and over being the most pronounced at 22.5 per cent. The latter was a new program last year and is therefore not shown for the previous year in the following comparative table:

	Percentage Increase in Caseload
	Fiscal Year 1964-1965	Fiscal Year 1963-1964
Old Age Assistance	2.1	6.7
Blind Persons' Allowances	1.4*	1.7
Disabled Persons' Allowances	7.5	8.1
Widows and Unmarried Women's Allowances	22.5

*Decrease.

Numerically, the total caseload increased from 67,134 on March 31st, 1964, to 71,918 on March 31st, 1965. The comparative numbers in each of the programs were as follows:

	March 31st 1965	March 31st 1964
Old Age Assistance	28,563	27,963
Blind Persons' Allowances	1,984*	2,013
Disabled Persons' Allowances	18,772	17,469
Widows and Unmarried Women's Allowances	9,561	7,804
Mothers' and Dependent Fathers' Allowances	13,038	11,885

*Decrease.

The rate of increase for the Mothers' and Dependent Fathers' caseload was again higher than the previous year, while Old Age Assistance and Disabled Persons' Allowances were considerably lower. As noted in the last report there was a serious backlog of uncompleted applications and other reports at the beginning of the fiscal year due to the commencement of the Widows and Unmarried Women's Allowances program. By the end of the year the number of outstanding applications had been reduced to about 400 of which the large majority were recent requests.

An indication of the rapidly expanding volume of work performed by the Field Staff is illustrated by the number of calls and visits they made during the year, a total of 290,634, up 20,804 from the preceding year. This is about 3,000 less than the increase reported last year. Old Age Assistance and Mothers' and Dependent Fathers' cases accounted for approximately 30 per cent of the total calls each; Disabled Persons' Allowances, about 20 per cent; Widows and Unmarried Women's Allowances, 8 per cent; and the balance were in relation to other programs and services.

The average monthly caseload per worker throughout the year was 421, a decrease of five per worker from 1963-1964. Included in this average figure are the specialized family caseloads which were established during the year in a number of urban centres with about 175 cases each. The formation of caseloads comprised of Mothers' and Dependent Fathers' Allowances recipients has permitted the assignment of competent members of the Field Staff to provide counselling and guidance services on a more concentrated basis. As a result of the additional attention these families are receiving some have been helped to become self-supporting and others who continue to need public assistance have been encouraged to use the funds more wisely and to raise their standard of living. It is anticipated more specialized caseloads will be established as qualified staff become available. Experimental work with selected families is also being carried out in the rural areas with individual field workers working closely with six to ten families.

The results of another year of operation of the Special Investigating Unit indicates less success than in preceding years in locating deserting fathers and husbands. The Unit conducted 3,442 investigations and located 1,364 men who had deserted their wives and families. This represents 25.2 per cent of the total compared to 42 per cent in 1963-1964. A partial explanation for the decrease was a greater number of long-term desertions in which efforts were made to trace deserters about whom very little information was known.

The number of cases in which allowances or assistance was suspended or withheld, however, increased significantly from 780 to 1,152 comprised of 540 General Welfare Assistance and 612 Mothers' Allowances cases. In effect, therefore, the net savings in public assistance funds was much higher than the previous year despite the lower location rate.

Of the 540 General Welfare Assistance cases where the husband was located and assistance withheld or suspended the husband was found to be living in the home and fully employed in 144 families or 26.7 per cent; in 16.5 per cent the wife was living in a common-law union with another man, and in 15.0 per cent she was found to be fully employed with sufficient income to maintain the family. The importance of the Special Investigating Unit in controlling fraudulent requests for assistance is evident from these statistics.

As the volume of work in the Branch continues to grow a close working relationship between our staff and the personnel of other public and private social agencies across the Province is essential to provide services to the population at large. What has been accomplished during the past year has depended to a large extent on the co-operation received from municipal welfare departments, private social agencies and other departments of government and to them we express our sincere appreciation.

GENERAL WELFARE ASSISTANCE BRANCH

Financial assistance to cover a variety of needs was made available to families and single persons under The General Welfare Assistance Act during the fiscal year 1964-65.

In all incorporated municipalities the Act provides for administration by the municipal officials.

Areas without municipal organization are administered by Provincial Regional Welfare Offices.

While the prime responsibility for administration of welfare services under the Act rests with the municipality, the senior governments share through reimbursements at statutory rates.

Although the rate of reimbursement to the municipality is generally 80% there are some exceptions payable at 50%.

The Government of Canada does not participate in the costs of certain provisions under The General Welfare Assistance Act and in such cases the Provincial Government increases its rate of participation from 30% to either 50% or the full 80%.

In order to relieve the municipalities of a greater portion of the long-term dependency cases, a broader base of eligibility under Mothers', Dependent Fathers', and Widows and Unmarried Women's Allowances has substantially decreased municipal welfare rolls over the past year.

GENERAL ASSISTANCE

All municipalities are required to provide for the welfare of needy persons and families. The Department has continued to offer encouragement to municipalities to consolidate welfare services at the County or District level. During this year developments in this area have been reflected in a reduced number of municipalities submitting individual accounts for reimbursement.

Although all of the 32 cities continue to submit accounts, only 838 of the remaining 945 municipalities were represented during the year and this figure was decreased by the 13 municipalities of Welland County during the last 4 months of the year.

The total expenditure of the Branch in 1964-65 was $46,325,571.00. The Provincial share of this was $18,392,611.00 with the Federal and municipal governments contributing $21,115,960.00 and $6,817,000.00 respectively.

MEDICAL AND DENTAL

Recipients of General Welfare Assistance and their dependents continued to be provided with medical care in their own homes or the doctor's office. This medical welfare plan results from an agreement between the Province and the Ontario Medical Association.

Emergency dental extractions are also authorized by the municipalities on an 80-20 sharing basis with the Province.

SUPPLEMENTARY AID

This form of assistance to recipients of Governmental benefits has continued to gain acceptance from the municipalities.

Where they are faced with high shelter costs or other extraordinary needs, recipients of Old Age Assistance, Old Age Security, Disabled Persons', and Blind Persons' or other categorical allowances may be provided with up to $20.00 per month by their municipality. This is a sharable item with the senior governments.

During the past year the number receiving this benefit grew from 5,660 to 6,026.

REHABILITATION

While the Rehabilitation Services Branch meets the needs of persons requiring prosthetic services for persons returning to a vocation, there is a large group who require such a supportive service to function in their own home or to maintain their community life.

Prosthetic services in such situations are provided by the municipality on a 50% sharing basis with the Province. The Federal Government does not participate in this service.

Some training programs and costs which cannot be handled by Rehabilitation Services are similarly paid by the municipal authorities under the same sharing arrangement.

TRANSPORTATION

On some occasions, perhaps because of the death of a spouse or for other family reasons, a family or individual will request assistance to return to their native land or another Province.

With the concurrence of the authorities of the place of origin, the municipality, working through Provincial channels, may provide transportation back. In such cases, where prior approval has been extended, the Province will share in the costs. In some such situations the Federal Government also participates.

Allowances are also provided for returning a deserting husband or father to a municipality for court appearances relative to support for his family.

NURSING HOMES

There have been extensive revisions to the Regulations governing nursing homes during the year. All municipal by-laws must be revised in accordance with these amendments.

The review of the by-laws is going forward rapidly to ascertain that provision is made for one or both of the two types of care now provided for in the Regulations.

As these by-laws are approved and the homes licensed the municipalities will be eligible for an increased rate of subsidy to a maximum of $115.00 for sheltered care or $140.00 for nursing services.

Nursing home service to needy residents has increased from 1,855 to 2,050 over the year.

OVER 50 UNIT

In co-operation with the City of Toronto, staff have been made available to provide social and employment assessment to unemployed employable males over 50 years of age.

Concentrated efforts including medical assessments are used to re-establish these men in gainful employment.

This has been a most fruitful project since 1962 and continues to be a valuable aid to the municipal and provincial welfare staffs.

EMERGENCY WELFARE SERVICES

Planning for welfare services under emergency conditions has been incorporated under General Welfare Assistance. Planning and municipal liaison for this purpose is the concern of a senior staff member.

HOMEMAKERS AND NURSES SERVICES

The Homemakers and Nurses Services program has demonstrated its value as one of the important basic resources for preserving home and family life. The hallmark of the program has been its flexibility. The ability to assign a homemaker by the day or part-time, to a variety of situations has accounted for a large part of the rapid development.

Nurses Services are equally flexible, and allow for periodic visits by a registered nurse, on the order of the attending physician to ill, disabled, handicapped or elderly persons for indefinite periods of time depending on the need for the service.

Both services are proving especially valuable in meeting many of the needs of elderly persons living in their own home.

In many instances, a few hours assistance with such duties as light cleaning, laundry, shopping, preparation of a hot meal, simple personal and bedside care is all that is required in order that the elderly person may remain in his familiar surroundings.

We should no longer look upon Homemakers and Nurses Services as being available to meet a crisis in a home; they should be regarded as preventive and restorative services in the new concept of home care and rehabilitation.

Many illnesses are often treated as effectively at home if adequate help is available to maintain the home and relieve the many stresses related to long-term illness.

Such fine voluntary agencies as the Victorian Order of Nurses, St. Elizabeth Visiting Nurses Association, Red Cross Homemaker Services and the Visiting Homemaker Associations continue to work very closely with municipal and county officials. Wherever possible service is purchased on a fee-for-service basis from the private agency. This is a good example of how the private and public agency can work together to the benefit of the people we both serve throughout the province.

Consultant services are continuously available through a Supervisor and the seventeen Regional Welfare Administrators.

MUNICIPAL HOMES

During this period, the total number of beds in municipally operated Homes has increased by 772.

Two new Homes were opened, both of which provided fully segregated areas for three types of care. One replaced an existing Home which only provided congregate care and the other was an addition to the growing list of Homes which now stands at 60.

Three additions to existing Homes added 250 beds to already fully segregated Homes and shows the growing need for beds in the latest type of Homes.

Four new Homes with a total of 685 beds were under construction. One of these was a replacement of an existing Home and the other three were additions to the total number of Homes. Also under construction were five additions and/or extensions to existing Homes with a total of 396 beds.

Plans were being drawn for two additional new Homes with a total of 164 beds and two additions and/or extensions to existing Homes with a total of 198 beds.

Ten complete new Homes and five additions and/or extensions to existing Homes are being contemplated.

It is of interest to note that at the end of 1964, 92.1% of all residents in municipally operated Homes for the Aged are housed in the newest fully segregated care Homes built within the past thirteen years.

The total number of residents requiring bed or semi-bed care continues to increase and at the end of 1964, 43.7% of residents in the Homes required this type of care.

CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS

Charitable Organizations continue to increase the supply of beds so much needed in the care of the aged. Two new Homes with a capacity of 285 beds were built. These replaced older and smaller buildings. Additions and/or extensions added 57 beds to four Homes.

Four complete new Homes with a capacity of 191 beds were under construction. Also under construction were additions and/or extensions to three existing Homes which will add another 300 beds.

ELDERLY PERSONS' HOUSING

Another building record since this program began in 1952, was established for this year. 515 new complete dwelling units were opened in seven different municipalities and a further 2,205 were under construction.

Since the legislation went into effect in 1952, a total of 3,239 complete dwelling units have been constructed.

SUMMARY

Improvement in the care of the aged is not confined solely to the provision of increasing numbers of beds in bright, modern Homes.

Chapels for the spiritual needs of the residents, auditoriums for their entertainment needs and handicraft rooms for keeping minds and bodies occupied with interesting hobbies are all being included in the new Homes or being added to the older Homes.

With an increased staff to provide guidance and help to the local Home Auxiliaries and Handicraft Supervisors, the Homes for the Aged Branch is endeavouring to see that full use is made of the above-mentioned facilities.

The courses at our Geriatric Centre for female staff members in the Homes continue to supply an increasing number of trained staff to cover the area of communication for those aged residents who have suffered strokes, have become senile or are withdrawn to the point where they do not recognize normal social activities.

REHABILITATION SERVICES BRANCH

The Rehabilitation Services Branch has continued to provide a comprehensive range of vocational rehabilitation services to an increasing number of handicapped persons. This last year some 2,014 persons were referred for assistance and received assessment and counselling services to determine the nature and degree of their handicap and to plan for useful employment. As in previous years, a substantial number of persons referred for assistance were found to be so severely disabled as to preclude any possibility of employment.

The rehabilitation program consists of seven basic services:

(1) Assessment: This initial step involves medical, social and vocational diagnosis to determine

- (a) the nature and degree of disability;
- (b) the individual's potential and work capacity;
- (c) the need for medical, social and vocational services.

This assessment is undertaken by counsellors of the Branch in consultation with the patient's attending physician and, if necessary, consultation with psychologists, teachers and employers, as well as supplemented by specialized rehabilitation facilities and workshops. While these facilities are growing in size and number, they are, of necessity, confined to the larger centres of population and make it necessary to bring substantial numbers of handicapped persons from rural and small town areas to Toronto and other major centres.

(2) Medical Restoration: Since the restoration of the disabled person to his maximum level of employability is the ultimate goal of rehabilitation, provision of medical and related services, such as artificial appliances, is particularly important.

Despite the fact that the majority of handicapped persons referred to the Branch have already received medical attention under the Ontario Hospital Services Commission or health insurance schemes, it was found necessary to provide treatment and appliances for 481 persons at a cost of approximately $86,000. The provision of artificial limbs remains the largest single category of service. This reflects the high costs not met by health insurance, the ability of most amputees to entertain vocational goals and the need for a field service to counsel around the complex needs of this disability group and to co-ordinate complex services required by this group.

Important technological improvements in artificial limbs are being made. This fiscal year saw the plastic total contact socket and the instant training pylon coming into general use with encouraging improvements. Soon electronic switches and electric motors in artificial arms will make life better for arm amputees. In partnership with medical experts in the field, the Branch has been prompt to implement those improvements which give good practical results. This, of course, means rising costs and very soon limbs costing over $500 will be the rule rather than the exception.

Staffing of the artificial limb, brace and custom shoe shops is becoming a problem. Existing staff are almost exclusively immigrants who received much of their training before coming to Canada. A number are at or are approaching retirement without young men in the shops to take their places. This may be seen as the greatest threat to the survival of this private enterprise. The glamour and challenge of recent research and technological innovations and closer association with medicine with its prestige may reverse this trend in time and attract bright young men to the shops with the assistance of training grants.

For our counsellors, the restoration program serves as an important casefinding facility in the sense of being able to offer vocational services to some who would not otherwise have been referred and in the sense of meeting handicapped people earlier after the onset of disability and before demoralization and failure become ingrained. Restoration services continue to serve to bring our counsellors into the general hospitals and into direct collaboration with physicians on a concrete basis which can set the stage for a team approach to less concrete problems.

(3) Counselling and Guidance: The key to the rehabilitation program is the guidance and counselling provided through all phases of rehabilitation to help the disabled person select and achieve the right job objective. During the fiscal year 1964/65, 4,490 persons received such help.

(4) Vocational Training: As in previous years, vocational training continues to be the second most extensive service provided and involved an expenditure of approximately $765,000. At the end of the fiscal year 1964/65, 537 persons were undergoing courses of training.

(5) Maintenance and Transportation: Another essential service is the provision of maintenance and transportation allowances during training and restoration. During the year the regulations were amended to increase the allowances to bring them into line with those provided by the Department of Education to trainees under Program 5 of the technical and Vocational Training Assistance Act.

(6) Occupational Tools: Equipment and tools which are necessary to enable trainees to obtain a particular job are provided. Barbering, watchmaking and electrical equipment repair continue to be the chief occupations where such help is required.

(7) Placement: The provision of employment is the final goal of vocational rehabilitation. During the year 204 disabled persons were placed directly into employment, while 551 were successfully employed following training or the provision of medical treatment and artificial appliances. The continued high level of employment has facilitated placement but has continued to create the same administration problems as last year. Many persons with lesser disabilities have been able to become rehabilitated without the help of organized programs. This leaves a great number of referrals consisting of more seriously handicapped persons suffering from mental illness or mental retardation and long-term recipients of public assistance. While the successful rehabilitation of such persons is more rewarding than that of the less seriously disabled, success is less assured and greater demands are made on the time and skill of the rehabilitation counsellor.

CO-OPERATION WITH VOLUNTARY AGENCIES AND EXPANSION OF FACILITIES

The co-ordination of government and voluntary rehabilitation services has remained as the cornerstone of the Branch's program.

Increased assistance through fees for services has been provided to a growing number of voluntary agencies. The expansion of workshop facilities noted in last year's report has continued. Workshops for the retarded have grown from 30 to 40, while the workshop planned for London by the Ontario Division of the Canadian Mental Health Association has commenced operations and is now serving a daily average of 20 persons.

STAFF DEVELOPMENT

The staff of the Branch has been hard pressed to meet the increased demand for service. Recruitment of qualified counsellors has also presented problems and the Branch has had to place heavy reliance on its in-service training and educational leave program. Last year 10 persons were employed and provided with intensive in-service training for six months, while three regular staff members were sent to the University of Toronto School of Social Work for post-graduate training.

VALUE OF REHABILITATION

The extent to which Ontario's rehabilitation program can improve the economic status of handicapped persons, increase the Province's productive potential and relieve some of the dependency on public assistance was strikingly shown by a review of a group of 372 of the persons who were rehabilitated following the provision of vocational training and restoration services. These persons rehabilitated in 1965 will, on a projection of their earnings for the first year of employment, pump more than approximately $1,000,000 in to the Province's economy. Placing this against the approximate $985 per trainee expended by the Branch, we find that for each $1 of cost, there were earnings of $2.75—an excellent return. The above does not include the earnings of those handicapped persons who were placed directly in employment, or who, as a result of rehabilitation services, became employed as homebound or family workers on no wages but contributed to the family income.

THE SOLDIERS' AID COMMISSION AND THE ONTARIO CANTEEN FUND

I have the honour to submit, herewith, the joint report of the Soldiers' Aid Commission and the Ontario Canteen Fund for the year ending March 31, 1965.

The survey of World War I widows mentioned in my previous report was very capably carried out by the Ontario Department of Public Welfare. Some three hundred widows were interviewed. Their average age was 70 years with an average income of $219.00 per month. It was confirmed that only 11% were in need of assistance, principally to finance the cost of house repairs. This help was promptly arranged. Total grants from the Kathleen Hammond Fund for the year amounted to $8,020.77.

Other Soldiers' Aid Commission assistance for all causes entailed an expense of $16,177.62 to which should be added administration costs of $9,749.34. This produced a total of $33,947.73 for the twelve month period. Total applications handled were 502, divided in the following proportion—Imperial veterans 86, Canadian veterans 416.

Ontario Canteen Fund grants during the fiscal year amounted to $36,760.14 for the benefit of 832 Canadian veterans and/or their dependents. Administration expense for the period amounted to $7,155.80, thus producing a total of $43,915.94.

On behalf of my colleagues I wish to express sincere appreciation for the excellent reports provided through the facilities of the Department of Public Welfare, the Department of Veterans Affairs and the Royal Canadian Legion, together with the World War II Benevolent Funds of the Canadian Navy, Army and Air Force. Applications from these Benevolent Funds on behalf of veterans with dual war service have been promptly handled on an equal participation basis with the Ontario Canteen Fund and with supplementary grants from the Soldiers' Aid Commission for the benefit of World War II veterans.

Our permanent staff of three, Miss Mary Macaulay, Gordon Buchanan and E. R. Seaman as Secretary have performed their duties in a most satisfactory manner.

Respectfully submitted,

*T. M. Medland,
Chairman.*

WELFARE ALLOWANCES BRANCH

During the year ending March 31, 1965, expenditures in excess of $31½ million were made in respect of the various programs administered by the Branch. This sum was disbursed in payments to the blind and disabled, old age assistance, assistance to widows and unmarried women, and allowances to mothers and dependent fathers.

Recipients of welfare allowances were also covered by the Department for premium free hospital insurance and care under the Medical Welfare Plan if their liquid assets did not exceed $1,000 if single and $1,500 if married.

OLD AGE ASSISTANCE

A monthly average of 25,076 persons received payments up to a maximum of $75 a month during the fiscal year. This accounted for an expenditure of $21,081,756.

The number of recipients transferred to Old Age Security was 5,653. However, with 8,093 new applications approved for payment during the year, this program still continued to show an overall increase of 3.4% over the previous year.

Approximately 13.48% of Ontario's population in the 65-69 age group received this form of aid.

BLIND PERSONS' ALLOWANCES

Expenditures totalling $1,581,936 were made during the fiscal year in respect of allowances to the blind, to a monthly average of 1,914 persons. Of the 268 new applications received, 213 (65.7%) were approved. Of the 98 applications declared ineligible, 70 were unable to meet the blindness test.

The department continues to enjoy a good working relationship with the Blindness Control Section of the Ottawa government. In conjunction with financial assistance to recipients, restorative treatment has continued throughout the year through the combined efforts of the provincial and federal authorities.

DISABLED PERSONS' ALLOWANCES

In the fiscal year under review, a monthly average of 16,751 persons received Disabled Persons' Allowances, an increase of 9.1% over the previous year. At March 31, 1965, there were 17,222 recipients of this form of aid, on whose behalf was a total expenditure of $14,822,064.

Of the 5,250 applications received during the year, 3,287 (52.5%) were approved and 2,583 (41.2%) were declared ineligible. Of the latter group, 91.3% were not considered to be both totally and permanently disabled within the meaning of the regulations.

ASSISTANCE TO WIDOWS AND UNMARRIED WOMEN

The number of recipients of Widows' Allowances at March 31, 1965 was 8,865, an increase of 2,068 (30.4%) over the number at March 31, 1964.

A monthly average of 8,168 women received payments totalling $8,972,174, as compared with a monthly average of 3,760 receiving a total of $2,918,329 for the year ending March 31, 1964, the year this program came into effect.

The general acceptance of this program and the need it satisfies in the community is, we believe, exemplified by these statistics.

MOTHERS' AND DEPENDENT FATHERS' ALLOWANCES

In the year ended March 31, 1965 beneficiaries under The Mothers' Allowances Act received aid totalling $12,230,028. Payments were made to a monthly average of 8,134 recipients in respect of 26,983 beneficiaries.

This program continues to be wholly administered and financed by the Province of Ontario.

A further $4,813,669 was expended under The General Welfare Assistance Act in respect of dependent father cases to a monthly average of 3,080 recipients involving 14,027 beneficiaries.

Premium free hospital insurance coverage for standard ward care and medical services under the Medical Welfare Plan were provided for beneficiaries of these programs. In addition, children under the age of eighteen years were eligible for coverage under the Dental Welfare Plan.

Amending Regulations under The Mothers' Allowances Act were filed on March 8, 1965 and under The General Welfare Assistance Act in respect of assistance to dependent fathers.

Several significant features in the program were changed by these amending regulations—the maximum allowance payable was increased to $300 a month, and the maximum allowances payable to foster mothers were also increased; in the case of one child from $30 to $40 a month, and in the case of two children from $50 to $75 a month, and $25 a month for each additional child (previously $15 a month).

Maximum shelter allowances were increased from $67.50 to $76.50 for unheated premises, and from $75 to $85 a month for heated premises. Important changes were also made with regard to earnings of recipients with the number of allowable hours of employment being increased to 120 hours a month and more generous exemptions being also introduced.

Another major advance in the Mothers' Allowances and Dependent Fathers' Allowances programs was that negotiations were entered into in the latter part of the fiscal year to extend the provisions of the Dental Agreement between the Royal College of Dental Surgeons and the Province so that dental care would be available to parents under these two programs.
